WILL NOT CUT INCOME TAXES

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Tax payers' dreams of a cut in their income taxes by the new congress will be rudely shattered.

Despite increased tax receipts Thursday there can be no general reduction of income tax rates until the people pay off a big portion of the cost of the world war and past wars.

All talk of lessening the tax burden is idle while 85 per cent of the government's expenses continue to go toward paying for past wars and keeping prepared in case of future wars.

That summary of the situation regarding the outlook for a revision of the revenue laws was made today by Representative Green of Iowa, the next chairman of the ways and means committee.

Little could be or should be lopped off the 15 per cent of government expenses that now goes for the upkeep of the civil establishment, in Green's opinion. Even a big cut in present army and navy costs, which constitute 20 per cent of the entire government expenses, would not enable congress to make a general downward revision of taxes, he believes.

Green has been in conference with high treasury officials regarding the clarifying and simplifying provisions in the present revenue law, but he knows of no program under consideration by the administration for tax revision, or any substitute for income taxes, such as the sales tax.

FASCISTI ENTER SOVIET

RUSSIANS SOMEWHAT ALARMED BY THE MOVEMENTS.

Hungary Is Also Invaded by Forces Sympathizing With Mussolini Form of Government.

ROME.—(By. Mail.)—The Mussolini theory of government and its application, which now threatens to sweep Europe, is that desperate situations need desperate measures and that only the younger crowd that came out of the war with courage, discipline, resource, decision, determination and with complete freedom from old-time methods and political ties can save the situation that exists in Europe today.

Successful as the Mussolini government has been in Italy to date, it is of course necessary to wait for a long time trial before passing final judgment.

The success of the Italian movement, however, has been contagious. Some idea of how serious the Russian situation is regarded by the soviets may be gathered from the fact that Vorowski, the Russian commercial and diplomatic representative in Italy, was summarily recalled because of his failure to keep the soviet government accurately informed of the importance of the fascisti movement in Italy.

As a result of his inadequate interpretation of the movement the soviet government at Moscow was not only taken quite unawares by the advent of Mussolini to power, but the consequent unpreparedness in Russia permitted of a sudden influx of the organization into Russia.

Altho little is known about the Russian fascisti, owing to the rigid measures taken by the soviets, not only to stamp it out but to keep it secret, men returning recently from Moscow declare that it constitutes at the present time the only serious movement directed against the soviets.

One of the most characteristic features of the spontaneous springing up of the movements in the various European countries where it has come into being, is that its original membership is almost invariably composed largely of the most daring spirits that came out of the war.

Hungarians Called Scythes.

The Hungarian fascisti have sprung from precisely the same elements that came out of the war. This is reflected to a large extent in the new name which they have just chosen for themselves. Despite all efforts of the Hungarian government to stamp out the local fascisti movement, the organization continues to exist and has just taken on the new name of "Scythians," or association of Scythes.

The Scythes were a legendary warlike tribe of great valor that at one time inhabited the plains north of the Danube and on up to the Don. They waged war with the Greeks and Herodotus refers to their valor.

In general where the movements composed of such spirits develop capable leaders like Mussolini in Italy, European students of current conditions are inclined to look with great sympathy on the programs being undertaken.

RECONSTRUCT DEATH SCENES

New York Police Believe Dorothy Keenan Was Chloroformed by Two Men.

NEW YORK, March 17.—A picture of the death scenes when Dorothy Keenan, alias King, known also as the "Broadway Butterfly" was chloroformed, was reconstructed by police today from the evidence at hand.

The girl was found dead in bed in her apartment. An empty chloroform bottle and a wad of cotton saturated with the anaesthetic law nearby. Dr. Charles A. Norris, chief medical examiner, pronounced it a "plain case of murder," and said that two men probably took part.

One of them held the beautiful artist's model's arms locked behind her while the other pressed the chloroform soaked cotton to her mouth and nose. The girl struggled and was partly out of the bed when she finally succumbed.

One of the most tangible clues is a gutta percha comb, such as men carry in their vest pockets. It was found beside the bed, where it had evidently dropped while the slayer was engaged in his crime.

Police are looking for a character whom Miss Keenan used to call "that terrible man." This person is believed to have terrorized her, and to have exerted a powerful influence over her. One theory is that she finally got up courage to defy him, whereupon he killed her.

BROOKHART'S BACK IN A BROADCLOTH SUIT? NEVER, SAYS THE INSURGENT IOWA SENATOR

If the last session of the sixty-seventh congress did nothing else it served to introduce Smith Wildman Brookhart, rampaging senator from Iowa, to the American public. He is going to be heard from even more violently in the sessions of the next senate, but his fling while filling out the unexpired term of Kenyon, who quit the senate for the federal bench, was enough to make it evident that he is going to be a source of vast difficulty for the policies of President Harding's wing of the party, when the group of which he is a member really holds the balance of power in the senate between the two great parties.

MILWAUKEE NOW HAS COOPERATIVE SOLUTION WHICH MAY BE END OF THE HOUSING PROBLEM

COOPERATIVE HOUSING IN MILWAUKEE and TYPE of OLD BUILDINGS DISPLACE

It was with the idea of solving the miserable housing condition of the working people that the Garden Homes company was incorporated in Milwaukee, Wis. A tract of land comprising twenty-eight acres of land, with good transit facilities was purchased, and it was artistically fitted for homes, while providing a spacious parked playground for children. Houses of five and six rooms were built on plots forty by 100 feet. The best of materials has been used in the construction of these homes, each of which possesses its own little garden plot. The site selected is in one of the most desirable localities of Milwaukee and the consequence is that the owner of one of these homes lives in a community where all are equally desirous of keeping up the property. Tenants buy shares in the Garden Homes company—they do not buy a house. At the beginning of this enterprise, when but sixty houses had been built, there was a waiting list of 900 would-be occupants. As houses became available, they went to those heading the list of shareholders.

LIVESTOCK PROSPECT BRIGHT

Southwestern Cattle Raisers Believe Times Best for Them Since War.

EL PASO, Tex., March 17.—Prospects in the livestock industry are the brightest since the war, leading traders, dealers and feeders gathered here for the Sounthwestern aCttle Raisers' association meeting agreed.

The gathering of stockmen in El Paso today is composed of the largest number of practical judges and livestock dealers who have come together since 1915.

The conspicuous absence of forced sales in all deals was apparent. Cattle men were generally optimistic.

The greatest inquiry was for yearling steers. Traders regarded this as a good indication of the return to faith in the future of the beef market.

Representatives of all cattle markets and range districts declared that the winter had been favorable for all kinds of livestock.

E. M. Carroll of the St. Joseph yards stated prospects were favorable for a banner year in the industry and that higher prices were the rule in most sales.

The Omaha delegation stated that Iowa and Nebraska had abundant feed and livestock would be well sheltered during the snow now prevalent in those states.

EUROPE REQUIRES SUPPORT

Schwab Says Interallied Commission of Bankers, Manufacturers and Diplomats Needed.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Europe needs the support of America, Charles M. Schwab said today upon his arrival here aboard the Cunard liner Aquitania.

An interallied commission of bankers, manufacturers and diplomats should be established to straighten out the financial affairs of Germany, he said.

"I am sorry that illness interfered with my trip to the Ruhr," said Schwab.

"I have come from Europe with the impression that things will come out all right, but what Europe needs is the moral and physical influence and support of the United States.

"An interallied commission would be an excellent thing for the financial affairs of Germany. This proposal, having come from England, I think, should be very favorably received by Germany. If such a commission is formed, I think the United States should participate.

"I think that such a commission should be composed of good bankers, diplomats and reputable manufacturers and I am sure that it would be acceptable to Germany and tend to straighten out her affairs."

Discussing the steel situation, Schwab said:

"Recent mergers of the Bethlehem steel corporation make this corporation the second largest in the United States, and in the world, for that matter, from the standpoint of production. These mergers are a step forward in an economic process because they facilitate cheaper and better diliveries. Some people were inclined to consider the United States steel corporation as a trust, but such is not true. By such mergers as we have gone thru every one is benefitted by cheaper products. I am still in favor of a change in the immigration laws, because the labor shortage is very acute in this country."

FEVER GIRL DECEIVES

The medical world was startled by the statement of Dr. Harry J. Defnet of Escanaba, Mich., that the fever of Miss Evelyn Lyons, a former nurse, had actually blown out the top of his clinical thermometer, and that a specially built one showed she had 118 degrees of fever. Specialists rushed there from Chicago ascertained that the girl was faking and that she was placing the thermometer against a hidden water bottle to show the phenomenal temperature. She said she started the trick for fun and then didn't know how to get out of it.

SAYS KILLED TRIO OF MEN

DORLEY EDWARDS TELLS STORY OF HARD LUCK TO OFFICERS.

Being Held in County Jail on Charge of Stealing a Suit Case From Margery O'Donnell After O Street Blaze.

Dorley Edwards, alias Courtney Jett, being held in the county jail awaiting trial on a charge of larceny growing out of the theft of a suit case of clothing from Margery O'Donnell after the O street fire this wee, says he has killed three men, and is an escaped convict from the penitentiary at Richmond, West Va.

"Oh, I'm not a bad guy," he told a reporter. "I just had a run of bad luck."

His first killing, according to his own story, was when he was fourtcen years old. He claims to have killed a town marshal who interrupted him while he was swimming with the marshal's own sons. One of the boys, he said, had the marshal's revolver, and he shot the official four times.

He was sent to the reformatory. Later, he says, he killed a policeman, and was pardoned for that.

The last killing was an affair in which Jett's brother-in-law was a victim. "They had been trying to steal my wife away from me," he related. "I jumped them about it, and they said they'd send for her if I'd give them $10. I gave it to them and they spent it for moonshine. One of them had a gallon jar of it. They got drunk and a nigger came along, and the three of them jumped onto me. I slashed two of them up with a razor and knocked another one over the head. It was a case of self defense, because if they hadn't been stopped they'd have killed me.

"I got sentenced for a year for that, and was serving down in Richmond. I had been playing crazy for two months, and had ninety days more to serve. One day I guess I did really go bughouse, because after I had been cracking rocks on a road I suddenly found myself on top of a high ridge. I think I had been there two days I just pulled out. No. I didn't go back to say goodbye to the warden."

After Edwards was arrested in Lincoln his wife was questioned. He was not willing to tell where they were married, and had warned her not to talk. Later he became obsessed with the fear that if he didn't tell where they were married two years ago he officers might send her to a reform school for living with a man not her husband.

Confronted with a statement by Deputy Sheriff Carl Schmitt that he had escaped from Richmond, Edwards at first denied it. At Roanoak, Va., where the marriage license was issued, the authorities knew Edwards was an escaped convict. To tell where the license was issued would be equivalent to giving himself away. Then he realized that if he told the truth about where the license was issued it would save his wife "from the reform school," as he believed. The fact of the matter is, according

BLIZZARD IS ON THE WAY

COLDER WEATHER WITH SNOW AND HIGH WIND COMING.

Temperature May Reach Zero at Lincoln by Sunday Morning Accompanied by a Gale From the Northwest.

The temperature began to fall at Lincoln at 2 p. m. At that hour it was 44 degrees. In the next hour it fell six degrees and continued to fall thereafter.

ONEILL, Neb., March 17.—A forty-mile an hour gale, accompanied by a sharp drop in temperature and snow of blizzard-like intensity, struck here at 10 o'clock this morning from the northwest.

RAVENNA, Neb., March 17.—A blizzard from the northwest reached this locality during the forenoon. It is snowing and blowing hard. Reports show that the storm is of wide extent.

AURORA, Neb., March 17.—A blizzard began here at noon. It is reported to be severe north of here, much snow coming in a high wind. A serious storm is reported to be raging north of here.

KEARNEY, Neb., March 17.—The mercury dropped from 48 to 26 degrees here in less than two hours today. Heavy wind and snow came with the cold.

HASTINGS, Neb., March 17.—A high wind with a decided drop in temperature struck this city at noon.

NORFOLK, Neb., March 17. — A terrific blizzard is raging from Casper, Wyo., to Norfolk. At this time a fifty mile gal eis driving fine snow into drifts. Freight trains are being annulled. The storm has been raging all day in the Black Hills, and at this time there is no sign of a let up.

The weather bureau Saturday morning announced that snow and colder weather may be looked for Saturday night. A northwest gale was scheduled to accompany the snow and colder weather.

Early Saturday Burlington railroad reports indicated that the blizzard was spreading over the entire Alliance division of the road, where snow was falling and a high wind was driving it along in drifts. It was said the storm was headed this way.

Morning reports issued by the weather bureau showed nearly half an inch of precipitation at Sheridan; .22 of an inch at Lander and .10 of an inch at Rapid City. Bismarck reported 6 degrees below zero; Rapid City reported 16 above and Sheridavn 10 above.

Snow thawed thruout the night in Lincoln, the low temperature mark being 36 degrees. The morning thaw started off with a rush and there was much water on the streets. Gangs were kept busy getting it into the drain ways and removing the dams made by snow banks piled up from the walks and street car tracks.

Railroad men said a heavy snow on top of what is left on the ground, driven by a high wind, might cause a bad blockade, as the amount needed to fill cuts would be much less than where there is no snow at the start.

TAUGHT CIGARET SMOKING.

LONDON, (By mail)—The man who introduced cigaret smoking in England and America has been found or re-discovered—ironically enough in the London bankruptcy courts. He is Nicholas John Coundouris, a Levantine who afterwards became an American citizen. Aged eighty-seven, with flashing eyes, a vast white beard, and wearing a tall Turkish fez, Coundouris is one of the most picturesque figures in London, but despite the millions since made out of cigarets, financial difficulties have landed him in the bankruptcy court.

OMAHA BANKERS PAY DR. HALL'S TRIBUTE

OMAHA, March 17.—Omaha bankers Friday voted the following resolution in tribute to the memory of Dr. P. L. Hall of Lincoln, who died Wednesday:

"In the passing of Dr. P. L. Hall, Omaha shares with Lincoln, our state and the nation the loss of a great citizen. Champion of the best in banking; statesman in political vision and value; builder of better ideals and methods in business; sound thinker and forceful executive; honored friend and counsellor of his fellows; Dr. Hall's long life, cheerfully dedicated to practical service, has left Nebraska a rich heritage of deeds, example and inspiration. In high places or low, his leadership among men rested on firm foundations of esteem, trust and good will.

"Remembering him who has meant much to us, we bankers of the city of Omaha pause here, in recognition of his worth, to officially record our affection for his fine personality, our gratitude for his character and accomplishments, our sense of loss at his leaving, and our consciousness that such a spirit lives with us always.

"Words cannot reveal what the heart holds, yet as some taken of our sentiment and sympathy, we place this expression with our permanent records and forward a copy to the family of our friend."

Relief For O Street Fire Victims

When fire burned the Henkle building on O street during the week twenty-two families were left homeless. The fire had gotten such a start when the alarm was given that the tenants had barely time to get out, some of them being carried down the fire escapes by firemen. They had no time to save any of their property. Some women escaped in their night clothing and lost all they had. Few carried insurance.

It is to benefit these families that The Journal has consented to ask for contributions from the people of Lincoln. Some of them are needy and their losses came thru no fault of their own.

Several contributions have been made and the sum is now in excess of $150. More is needed. Send cash or checks, any amount you can afford to give, to The Journal and the money will be properly listed, placed and accounted for. Address contributions to

WILL APPEAL BANK CASE

ATTORNEY GENERAL DEFEATED IN HOLDREGE SUIT.

Judge Dilworth Reenters His Order Upon Guaranty Fund—Appeal Will Suspend This Judgment.

Attorney General Spillman upon receipt of a copy of Judge W. A. Dilworth's decision reaffirming his order to require the payment of $187,000 from the state guaranty fund to the Citizen's bank of Holdrege said he would appeal the case to the supreme court and ask for the advancement of the suit. It is his opinion that an appeal in this case will supersede the order of the district judge and that order will not be in force pending the appeal. He hopes for a speedy hearing when the appeal is perfected.

Judge Dilworth's order for payment from the guaranty fund was issued December 18, 1922.

In rendering his decision Judge Dilworth called the attention of the attorneys to the fact that delays in this case were keeping funds out of circulation in the business circles of this community, and that if anything was going to be done it should be done at once. He called their attention also that in either case the guaranty fund was liable for the losses, whether they paid the above amount to the Citizens State bank, and let them handle the matter, or whether they paid it out as a loss on the closing up of the Citizens State bank, for which no receiver has as yet been appointed.

None of this discussion appears in the written order of the judge. The attorney general takes the ground that the manner in which the attempt was made to liquidate the Holdrege State bank and the contract between that bank and the Citizens State bank are not in accordance with law governing liquidation of banks.

Judge Dilworth's ruling contains fifteen or more findings. He finds that on May 21, 1921, the Holdrege State bank was insolvent and determined upon a liquidation of its affairs.

That it thereupon entered into contract with the citizens State that the two banks had authority to enter into such a contract: that the contract was approved by the department of trade and commerce; that the object of the contract was to provide a way for liquidation of the Holdrege State bank.

He finds that the Holdrege State bank retained and still retains all the right and authority of a banking corporation whose affairs are being liquidated; that the department of trade and commerce had and still has a right to apply for a receiver of the Holdrege State bank; that the application of the department for a receiver was made by the department to this court November 7, 1922.

He finds that under the terms of the contract the Citizens State became subrogated to the rights of the depositors of the Holdrege State bank to look to the state guaranty fund for payment of their deposits in the same manner as the Holdrege State bank could have done if a receiver for it had been asked for in the first instance before any of the depositors had been paid; that the amount paid by the Citizens State bank of the assets of the Holdrege State to be applied in payment of deposits of the latter bank was $150,880.07, leaving a balance due the Citizens State for reimbursement of the amount paid to depositors of the former bank of $187,815.80.

The district judge further finds: "That owing to the failure of crops and resultant scarcity of money, that no further cash could be realized on the assets of the Holdrege State bank except by forced sale thereof, which would have involved great loss to the Holdrege State bank and its stockholders, and would have been of small benefit to the Citizens State bank; that therefore, in order to avoid said loss and to preserve its own existence, the Citizens State bank was obliged to assert its right of subrogation provided for in said contract and present a claim for said balance to the receiver of the Holdrege State bank, and ask that it be allowed by the court and directed payment out of the state guaranty fund. This was done.

"The court further finds that the order made by this court on December 18, 1922, allowing said claim and directing its payment from the state guaranty fund was proper and authorized by law, and that the best interests of all concerned, including the state guaranty fund, demanded such action.

"That if other findings had been made in this matter, other than those above stated, it would have resulted in the court failing to recognize and carry out the object and purpose for which the bank guaranty fund was intended.

RECESS IN FOSTER TRIAL

Case of Alleged Communist on Trial in Michigan to Be Resumed Monday.

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., March 17.—A recess until Monday was declared by the court hearing the case of William Z. Foster, alleged communist on trial charged with violation of the Michigan syndicalist law.

With resuming of the trial next week, the prosecution will present testimony of government agents in an effort to further connect Foster with the alleged convention of communists held at Bridgeman, Mich.

Foster, while admitting he attended the convention, declares he was there merely in the capacity of an observer and not as a delegate.

HARDING VACATION MOST SUCCESSFUL

President Has Eluded All Who Tried to Break Into Plans for Complete Rest—Little Business Transacted.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 17.—President Harding said today that this was the most successful vacation he had ever experienced. He has eluded all who sought to break into his plans for complete rest. Virtually the only official business transacted has been a request from Secretary Hughes for an approval of his reply to the allies on the payment of America's Rhine army expenses, and a reply sent late last night to Secretary Hoover, who requested the president to issue an executive order permitting the department to designate a temporary assistant secretary of commerce.

Present plans call for a stop at Palm Beach Saturday night, church there Sunday, after which the party will board the house boat and start the journey to Ormond. Indications are the president will not make so many golfing stops on the way north. He expects to arrive at St. Augustine March 23 or 24, spend a week there, then possibly two or three days at Augusta, Ga., returning to Washington shortly before April 10

DEATH OF LEE BEING PROBED

THEORY OF SUICIDE DOUBTED BY THE OMAHA POLICE.

Lincoln Tire House Manager Was Found Dead From a Bullet Wound in an Omaha Private Home.

OMAHA, March 17.—The fatal shooting of A. B. Lee, North Platte, Neb., branch manager at Lincoln for the General Tire and Rubber company of Akron, Ohio, has resulted in the arrest of three occupants of the house at 1051 Twenty-third street where police found him dead on the bathroom floor yesterday afternoon.

As told by H. W. Kellogg, his daughter Clara Kellogg, and Joe Sutton, who are held for investigation pending the coroner's inquest Monday, Lee had been visiting at the house an hour before they heard a shot and all three rushed to the bathroom where they found him dying.

The location of the wound and the fact that there were no powder burns on his forehead led police to believe that the theory of suicide may not be supported.

A blood covered .38 calibre revolver was found by Lee's side. Powder marks were so slight they were overlooked on first inspection. An empty shell was found in a pail in the room. Police are investigating every possible angle of the shooting.

Lee's headquarters were in Lincoln. When in Omaha he sometimes lived at the Omaha Athletic club, sometimes stayed at downtown hotels and sometimes visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Yates, 1005 South Thirtieth avenue, according to Yates, who said he has been an intimate friend of Lee for years.

Police were called to the scene by H. W. Kellogg, who lives at 1051 South Twenty-third street with his daughter, Clara.

Emergency Officer George Brigham and Chauffeur Earl Sherwood, who investigated, said they found Leet sitting upright, one foot on a little chair, with a bullet hole through the center of his forehead. There were only faint traces of powder marks on the man's forehead, Brigham said, although the weapon with which he had been killed was a .38 caliber revolver.

The revolver was lying in a bucket just below Lee's right hand.

"We cannot understand any reason for "suicide," explained Yates "and we are sure it was not a murder. Able was very proud of his gun, however, and often took it from its holster to examine it. It may be that he shot himself accidentally while examining it."

"He had no financial troubles that

CRITICIZES POLICE COURT

Indignant Witness Believes That All or None of Traffic Ordinance Should Be Enforced.

"Lincoln is the laughing stock of the state because of the attitude of its police court," said E. E. Mockett, auto dealer, in court Saturday where he appeared in behalf of his son Ellis who was charged with driving an auto with a paper license tag. The defendant produced receipt showing that he had secured a license and the case was dismissed by Police Judge Chappell. "Last night I counted twenty autos on the street without lights," continued Mr. Mockett, and I have even seen Chief Johnstone violate city ordinances. I want to see these ordinances enforced but if certain ones are enforced to the letter why not enforce all to the letter."

"Every man from out of town has been treated as a gentleman in my court and has been invited to return to the city," replied Judge Chappell. Mr. Mockett based his argument upon a conversation that he had with a garage man at Pawnee City who said that he had recently been fined in police court. No man from Pawnee City was fined in police court since Judge Chappell has been on the bench, according to the judge.

SUES FOR $5,000 DAMAGES

Minnie E. Steffen Claims Hurlburts and James Eliott Were Careless and Caused Accident.

Minnie E. Steffen filed suit Saturday morning in district court asking $5,000 damages from James Elliott, Ernest L. Hurleburt and Raymond L. Harlburt, alleging that carelessness of the defendants caused an auto accident January 20, 1923, on the S. Y. A. highway between Malcolm and Woodlawn., in which the plaintiff was painfully hurt.

She claims she was riding as a passenger in the auto of Fred A. Hudgens about 150 feet behind the Hurlburt auto, which it is alleged, was being operated with a glaring spotlight and headlights. The Elliott auto according to the plaintiff, passed the Hurlburt car coming from the opposite direction and blinded by the lights on the Hurlburt auto, the defendant Elliott swerved so as to strike the Hudgens car. She claims injuries to her spine, a shock to her nervous system and permanent disability to follow her former occupation of domestic and laundress

GERMANY LAYS CASE BEFORE MR. HUGHES

Outlines In General Way How Far She Is Willing To Go To End Occupation.

IS WILLING TO NEGOTIATE

Forty Soldiers Killed in Ruhr Train Wreck.

MANY ADDITIONAL INJURED

French Throw Cordon of Soldiers About Scene of Disaster and No One Is Allowed to Approach the Wreckage.

BERLIN, March 17.—Forty soldiers are reported killed in a train wreck in the Ruhr valley.

According to a dispatch from Friemersheim, a French troop train collided with a freight near that city.

In addition to the forty soldiers reported dead, many were injured.

The French threw a cordon of troops around the scene of the disaster. No persons were allowed to approach the wreckage and details were unobtainable.

From vantage points outside the cordon, however, it could be seen that many cars in the troop train had telescoped.

Crisis Before U. S.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Germany has officially laid her case in the Ruhr crisis before the United States government, it was learned authoritatively today.

A communication from the Berlin government outlining a general way how far Germany is willing to go to bring an end to the Rush occupation, was placed before Secretary of State Hughes last night by the German embassy here.

While neither Secretary Hughes nor Counsellor Dieckhoff of the German embassy, who presented the note, would discuss it, it was learned that this communication is the explanation of the recent cloud of conflicting reports from Europe of secret negotiations between Berlin and London to bring about settlement in the Ruhr. The same exposition of Germany's position has been laid before the British government. The real object of Germany's action is to start negotiations which will end the Ruhr occupation with the United States and Great Britain playing the roles of peacemakers.

Germany is anxious to end the occupation, but at the same time in presenting her cause to the two governments she is showing no willingness to surrender to the French demands. But she is expressing a willingness to negotiate the reparations question and is indirectly inviting the British and American governments to take the lead in this matter.

No Specifications.

It was learned that the note handed to Secretary Hughes did not specify any definite reparation settlement which Germany is willing to pay to end the occupation, nor does it specifically demand the withdrawal of the French and Belgian troops as a prerequisite to negotiations.

Whether Hughes will feel warranted in communicating the text or sense of the German statement to French Ambassador Jusserand is a question, but there undoubtedly will be some conversations concerning the subject.

PARIS, March 17.—Germany's proposal for "peace" in the Ruhr valley, according to Pertinax and other well informed authorities her, is as follows:

1—Withdrawal of allied engineers and officials from the valley.

2—French troops to remain until settlement has been reached.

3—Such settlement to be based on a permanent agreement with regard to coal deliveries, and payment of reparations, the latter to be financed by international loans.

The Parisian newspapers say that the offer is not likely to be accepted.

MAKING PLAY OVER NELSON

DEMOCRATS GRAB STRAW TO USE AS PROPAGANDA.

Anti-Code Stand by Member From Pierce, However, Is Merely Same Stand He Has Held for Four Years.

Democrats are inclined to make much over Representative Nelson's anti-code stand on the floor of the house Friday afternoon. They are expected to use this propaganda straw in an effort to influence members who are not familiar with the fact that the member from Pierce merely took the stand that he has always taken. Those who know him well had little doubt but that he would hold consistent to his vote of four years ago when he opposed the code.

It was, however, gratifying to republicans to hear from the lips of Mr. Nelson that he has little regard for either plan. They cannot see wherein the democrats are in a position to capitalize the stand of an anti-code republican when the latter makes this comparison between the Bryan plan and the Dysart plan:

"It is the difference between a nickel and a five-cent piece."

Nor do republicans consider that Representative Nelson hurled any bouquets at Governor Bryan when he expressed favor of giving him all the rope he needs. But for the fact that a republican legislature must be held responsible for the laws of this session, other republicans probably would offer similar expression. Members of the majority party make no secret of the belief that Governor Bryan is extremely fortunate in having a legislature which declines to bow to his will. They contend that were the legislature democratic in tone and willing to follow their leader, the fall would be mighty.

But republicans believe also that if the democrats were without this safety valve in the form of a republican majority, they would not be following so closely in the governor's steps. The minority members, according to republicans, appreciate the fact that they may safely lean upon the political rail without dampling their feet in the snow drifts. They are aware of the safety valve.

PRETTY GIRLS BEST DRY AGENTS

DENVER, March 17.—It takes the women to get 'em—even the bootleggers, according to E. H McClenahan, federal prohibition director of this district who announces he wants some real vamps on his staff of dry sleuths. According to him, women can't be beaten for obtaining evidence of dry law violations. They can find out things that would utterly baffle a man.

GERMANY'S WHITE BOOK.

BERLIN, (By mail)—The German government has just issued a "White Book," containing the notes exchanged with France since the beginning of the Ruhr invasion. The book is quite sizeable and contains a series of notes whose language is certainly unprecedented as far as sharpness of tone is concerned in the history of any two nations during peace times.

LATE NEWS OF YESTERDAY

CONDUCTOR ROBBED FOR SECOND TIME

C. G. Egner, Wyuka Car Conductor, Relieved of About Thirty-five Dollars at 9 O'clock Friday Night.

C. G. Egner, 744 North Twelfth street, was held up Friday night and relieved of about $35 for the second time within a year while on duty as a Wyuka street car conductor. The holdup took place at Thirty-sixth and O streets. Fred Brown is supposed to have been the holdup man June 26, 1922, on the occasion of Mr. Egner's first encounter. About the same amount of money was taken from him then as on Friday night.

Being afraid of bandits, Egner told police that he has made a practice of not changing his trolley about at the end of the line, but waiting until he reached Thirty-fourth street, two blocks farther west. The trip which ended at 9:05 Friday went in the usual way, but at the end of the line, two men came running as if they wished to board. The door was opened. One man, or it might have been a youth, jumped on, displayed a revolver, and took command.

"He told me not to move but get right off," Egner said. Egner got off. About $10 of his own cash, besides the company's money, was taken. He also lost two keys and other articles. One of the men started to pull the car trolley, he said, but did not finish the task. Egner said he chased the pair west to Thirty-fourth streets in spite of their warning, and called for help. People would not listen to his cries that he had been robbed, he declares. One of the men wore a brown overcoat and a hat, the other, a dark suit and a cap.

Egner's holdup last June was at 9:45 o'clock. The highwayman took his stand at the end of the car line and came into action as Egner was changing the trolley. At that time, the line extended a block or so farther, and the assailant had even better concealment.

NEW BUILDING IS PRESENTED

ELLIOTT SCHOOL TURNED OVER TO PATRONS.

Exercises Friday Evening—E. E. Henkle and Superintendent Lefler Urge Building Program.

The formal opening and presentation of the new Elliott school at Twenty-fifth and N streets to the patrons of the district was held by the school board at the school building Friday night. The room in which the program was held inadequate to accommodate the crowd and no estimate was made as to the attendance. Hundreds of people, however, circulated thruout the building during the evening viewing the varied facilities afforded and asking numerous questions.

The presentation speech was made by Cora F. Warner, president of the board, who told something of the pride which the school board took in the fine new structure and their pleasure in turning it over to the patrons of the district.

E. E. Henkle, chairman of the Elliott building committee and vice president of the board, presided over the meeting. He appealed to the people of Lincoln to get back of the building program of the Lincoln schools and urged them to use every influence to secure the passage of the bill now before the legislature.

M. C. Lefler, superintendent of the city schools, made a forceful plea for more and better school buildings. By means of charts he outlined the proportionate growth of the school and city population and showed that the ratio had doubled in the past ten years. Despite all efforts and an extensive building program, the number of students who are forced to attend in unsuitable surroundings, such as basements and attics of old buildings, corridor rooms and "cottages," is as large in actual numbers, altho not proportionately, as ten years ago. He said that of fifty-two cities of the middle class which he had included in a survey, Lincoln stood the highest in proportionate number of high school graduate.

Miss Sadie Baird, principal of the Elliott school, spoke of the pleasure and pride that both teachers and students took in the new building and of the more efficient work possible with the modern equipment and facilities.

Frank D. Tomson, on behalf of the patrons of the district, made the speech of acceptance and expressed appreciation of the work of the school board and told of the interest of the people of Elliott community in the building.

Mrs. F. S. Mendenhall of the Parent-Teacher association, recounted the work of the association. She said there was considerable need of a social welfare board, due to the enlarging of the district.

Mayor Zehrung gave a short talk praising the work of the board. He said that he was heartily in favor of the building program and believed in giving the school board all the support it needed in order to keep up the good work.

M. L. Palmer told a little of the trials and tribulations of a board member.

Several musical numbers were furnished by pupils of the Elliott school. Mrs. George Sturdevant, accompanied by Mrs. James Mitchell on the piano, sang three vocal solos. After the regular program the Capitol school orchestra furnished music.

The new Elliott school is one of the largest and most modern in the city. It has twenty-five regular class rooms in addition to two kindergarten rooms, two play rooms, two manual art rooms, the music room the hygiene department and the cafeteria and kitchen. The total cost of the structure is about $360,000. It will accommodate between 1,100 and 1,200 pupils. The music room occupies the entire tower, in order that the noise may not disturb the rest of the rooms.

Forty mill on dollars was spent in Canada last year on good roads.

HEART BALM FOR FREMONT WOMAN

Amount Said to Be the Most Ever Given in Nebraska Court Goes to Mrs. Ezra Sohl in an Alienation Suit.

FREMONT, March 16.—Mrs. Elizabeth Sohl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Brecklin, Fremont, has been awarded $12,500 by a Saunders county jury for the alienation of her husband's affections by her father-in-law, John Sohl, now residing in California. The case went to the jury Thursday night. The grant is said to be the highest amount of heart balm ever awarded in Nebraska.

The suit was the result of incidents dating to September, 1921, when the Sohls resided on a farm near Cedar Bluffs. John Sohl came to visit them from California soon after their marriage. Mrs. Sohl alleged that he poisoned the mind of his son against her and continually stirred up trouble that led to a domestic split. She charged the father-in-law with forcing her to seek elsewhere for a livelihood and shelter. At that time they had three children, aged nine, eleven and thirteen years.

When the separation was apparently permanent and the father-in-law's influence appeared to have completed its purpose, Mrs. Sohl states that she applied for a divorce. The decree was granted two weeks ago, allowing the mother custody of three children and $2,500 in alimony. Mrs. Sohl is employed at a Fremont bakery.

Ezra Sohl, the husband, is a prosperous, well-known farmer in Saunders county.

ST. PATRICK AND SNAKES

Ireland's Patron Saint Is Hero of Tradition in Killarney Lake Country.

Before Irish republicans and Irish free staters were flinging themselves at each others throats, yea, even before home rule was a shibboleth and Emmett a name to conjure with, there grew up in Ireland a tradition surrounding the name of the patron saint of the green little isle, whose memory is renewed every March 17 in the minds of millions. Everybody knows that there are no snakes in Ireland because St. Patrick drove them out fourteen hundred years ago, and the story of the last Irish serpent and his outwitting by the missionary from Gaul is a favorite tradition of the green country about the lakes of Killarney.

When the labors of St. Patrick were drawing to a close, the story runs, one enormous serpent who had sturdily refused to emigrate, still baffled the attempts of the good saint. He haunted the romantic shores of Killarney, and was so well pleased with his place of residence that he never contemplated the prospects of removing without a deep sigh. At last St. Patrick having procured a large oaken chest with nine strong bolts to secure the lid, took it upon his shoulder one fine sunshiney morning and truged over to Killarney, where he found the serpent basking in the sun. "Good morrow to ye," said the saint. "Bad luck to you," replied the serpent. "Not so my friend," replied the saint, "you speak unwisely, I am your friend. To prove which haven't I brought you this beautiful home as a shelter to you, so be aisy my darling."

But the serpent being a cunning reptile, understood what blarney meant as well as the saint himself. Still not wishing to affront his apparently friendly visitor, by way of excuse, he said that the chest was not large enough for him. St. Patrick answered that the chest would accommodate him very well, just get into it my darling and see how comfortable you will be. The serpent thought to cheer the saint, so he whipped into the chest, but left out an inch or two of his tail. "I told you so," said he, "there is not room for the whole of me."

"Take care of your tail, my darling," cried the saint and he whacked the lid upon the serpent. In an instant the tail disappeared and St. Patrick proceeded to fasten all the bolts. He then took the chest on his shoulders.

"Let me out," cried the serpent.

"Aisy," cried the saint, "I'll let you out tomorrow."

So saying he threw the chest into the lake where it sank to the bottom to rise no more. But forever afterwards, the fishermen affirmed they heard the voice of the poor cheated reptile eagerly inquiring. "Is tomorrow come yet?" "Is tomorrow come yet?"

SOLAR PLEXUS FOR MINORITY

DEMOCRATS MAKE MISTAKE OF ADMITTING GOODNESS.

Mathers Gets Them on Record and Then Proves That They Have Repudiated Platform.

Speaker of the house, A. N. Mathers hurled another bomb Friday afternoon when, after questioning the democrats as to their good faith in regard to party and party platform, he trotted out their own party platform and proved to them that in rebuking his amendment to place the state's activities under its elected executive officers, they had rebuked the party pledge.

"Are you good democrats?", he asked.

"Yes," "Yes," came the answer from all parts of the house.

"Do you want to stand on your party platform?"

"Yes," "Yes," "Yes," again the response came from many democratic seats.

Then he read from the democratic state party platform the following:

"We pledge ourselves to economy, simplicity and efficiency in the administration of state affairs; to the reduction of taxes by reducing the cost of government. Specifically we pledge ourselves to abolishment of the existing duplication in state government by repeal of the administrative code law, to the discharge of a great army of useless employes now on the payroll and to a reorganizing of various departments in the hands of elected state officers, thus restoring the constitutional government that is responsible to the people and responsive to their will."

"I am a republican—are you a democrat? Do you stand on your platform? Answer yes or no."

"We favor placing administrative and departmental work back in the hands of regularly elected state officers as intended by the constitution. We believe in a re-grouping of the various departments in the hands of the proper state officials where said state officials can be held directly responsible to the voters who elect them."

There was no one to dispute the speaker. He merely had showed them wherein their own platform supported the proposal which he offers: the re-grouping of departmental activities under elected state officers. He has no quarrel with them. He offered his amendment as an entering wedge—a common ground upon which republicans and democrats may meet. He is not insisting that his amendment be not changed. If his grouping is not satisfactory, he doesn't particularly care. He did not tell the democrats that it is up to them to support the Dysart plan. He did remind them that they cannot consistently oppose his amendment.

"Now democrats, what have I done? Nothing more than to incorporate into an amendment exactly what your platform provides—a platform that you have just said you will back."

CITY POLITICS GET WARM

SEVEN DAYS UNTIL CITY COMMISSIONER RACE CLOSES.

Four Candidates Have Already Filed and Petitions Are Being Circulated for Others.

With only seven days left in which to file for the nomination of city commissioner and for mayor, the political pot is beginning to boil. Four have filed for the office. They are Paul Goss, E. E. Taylor, William S. Waters and Andrew G. Church. The present city commissioners will file their petions. The friends of Governor Bryan are laying plans to put five candidates in the field, one for mayor.

Ed. Schroder, Bryan lieutenant has already announced that Edgar F. Snavely, young business man, has been selected to run for mayor and that if he declines that the "progressives" will draft him. Attempts have been made to induce Harry P. Letton, a member of a local engineering firm, to run for water and light commissioner. Mr. Schroder says that that department now needs an experienced engineer. It is understood that Mr. Letton has not yet proved receptive.

Petitions are now being circulated for Judge Howard J. Whitmore for mayor. He has stated that he is not a candidate. His supporters are going ahead, however, under the assumption that he will accept. Petitions are also being circulated for E. F. Snavely. He is out of the city and no statement has been obtained from him. He is expected to return home the first of the week.

Mr. Schroder says that the die is cast, and that the progressives have decided that the city hall must be cleaned out and that the four members of the present city commission are slated to go if the opposition is able to secure votes enough.

It is gossip that Frank M. Coffey and Clifford L. Rein may get in the race. Mr. Coffey has heretofore represented organized labor and has been a candidate several times. More than once, according to his statement, he nearly made the grade. It is reported that efforts are now being made to induce C. C. Flansburg to run for mayor. He served at one time as city attorney. Mr. Flansburg was also out of the city Friday and could not be seen. A friend was quoted to the effect that he does not want office.

Andrew G. Church is the oldest candidate. He is a civil war veteran. At one time he was a candidate for the state legislature but was defeated. He says that he has nothing to do and he might as well spend his time at the city hall serving as commissioner. Petitions are being circulated for Paul Dennis as a candidate for city commissioner. He is a member of the state legislature.

QUESTIONED ABOUT RECORD

Officers Not Satisfied With Information Given Out by Dorley Edwards, Held Here.

Dorley Edwards, arrested last week and bound over to the district court on a charge of stealing a suitcase from Margery O'Donnell, may be an escaped inmate of the Virginia state penitentiary. Police officers, federal officers and the sheriff's force were not satisfied with the reports Edwards, who may be Courtney Jett, gave of himself, made an investigation, and later questioned him on whether or not he was in Virginia.

Sheriff Hensel reported that Edwards told officers that he had been sentenced to the West Virginia penitentiary to serve five years on a charge arising out of the killing of a policeman. He is reported to have admitted that he knocked out a guard or trusty, and to have escaped.

Sheriff Hensel immediately began an investigation to determine the accuracy of this "confession," and received word from Richmond Friday afternoon that a picture of the escaped convict, and a letter with details were being mailed. Edwards is to be questioned further Saturday morning. Edwards was unable to give bail after being bound over to the district court on the larceny charge, and was committed to the county jail to await trial.

ONE HURT IN A COLLISION

John Schuster of Filley Badly Injured When His Car Hit by One of Archie Peterson.

FILLEY, Neb. March 16.—John Schuster, a farmer, living near this place, received severe cuts and bruises about the head and hands, and five other persons in his and Archie Peterson's autos, escaped injury by a narrow margin, when the two cars collided head-on, on the highway four miles north of Filley. The Schuster car was turning out to a neighbors when the collision occurred. Both machines were badly damaged.

MISTAKES OF C. W. BRYAN

LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE SAYS DEFICIT IS ERROR.

Figures Show $1,150,000 Surplus by July 1, and No Basis for $4,000,000 Future Deficit.

A dignified and calm discussion of state finances in the form of a report from a joint legislative committee, one which refuted a recent statement of Governor Bryan in regard to a deficit of $2,225,000 in the state treasury at the beginning of the year and a probable deficit of $4,000,000 at the close of 1923, was filed in both houses of the legislature Friday. The governor's name was not directly mentioned in the report.

The report alleges there is no deficit in any departments of the state government and that instead of a deficiency at the close of the biennium, July 1, 1923, there will be a balance of $1,150,000 on hand. The report says no estimate can honestly be made of the condition of the various state funds at the close of the calendar year because it is not known what appropriations will be made by this legislature and what the tax levies are to be.

The report was signed by Senators Perry Reed and George B. Hastings and Representatives Elmer J. Lamb and R. E. Harrington. Senator Charles J. Thielen, democratic member of the joint committee, presented a request for ten days' time for the purpose of picking errors in the report and moved that the report be "tabled" for ten days. The minority stated that if they did not find errors in the report by that time they would sign it, at least that was the statemen by Senator Thielen, and he said he believed Representative Bock felt the same about it.

What the Committee Found.

The joint committee report says:

Your joint committee to investigate the finances of the state of Nebraska appointed on the 16th day of February, 1923, by the house and senate of the Nebraska legislature forty-second session, begs leave to submit the following report.

Your committee reaches the conclusion herein set forth after having made a careful examination of the reports submitted to the committee by the heads of the various departments concerned with the financial affairs of the state government and this report is based upon the documents and reports submitted by such officers. These documents consist of carefully prepared reports by George W. Marsh, auditor; George E. Johnson, secretary department of public works; Charles D. Robinson, state treasurer; C. A. Sommer, state accountant and these reports are transmitted herewith.

That there are no deficits in any of the departments of the state government; that sufficient balances remain in all operative appropriations to last until the close of the biennium; that, with the balance due from the federal government on the road building program, collected, sufficient money will be available to meet all contracts entered into; that instead of a deficiency at the close of the present biennium there should be at least $1,150,000 surplus in the current revenue funds of the state; and that neither the appropriations nor the tax levies have been made to cover the expenditures of the state from July 1, 1923 to January 1, 1924 so that no estimate can honestly be made of the condition of the various funds of the state at the colse of the present calendar year.

We find that under the fiscal policy of the state of Nebraska there has always been a temporary shortage in the general fund and other funds based on receipts from taxes, on January 1, of each year. Appropriations are available for expenditure from July 1, formerly April 1, while the money to meet these expenditures does not reach the state treasurer thru tax collections until six or ten months later. This situation is discussed more fully later in this report.

We find that on January 1, 1923, the State of Nebraska had $2,763,303.70 on hand and one deposit in the banks of the state, together with the $11,771,919.21 invested in bonds. We also find on July 1, 1922 there was a balance of collected taxes due the state from the county treasurer of $829,010.92. There was also uncollected taxes due from the counties to the amount of $2,928,621.69. The two mill levy for the general fund for 1922 amounts to $6,405,411.42, and for the capitol building fund, $960,955.71, a total of $11,123,999.74. Up to January 1, 1923, there had been turned into the state treasury taxes collected amounting to $3,066,009.46, leaving outstanding on January 1, 1923, $8,057,990.28. The records show that 97 per cent of the state taxes are collectable which would give $7,816,250.57 as taxes outstanding on January 1, 1923 all of which are due and payable previous to June 30, 1923. The receipts from fees, etc., not including federal aid road fund from January 1 to June 30 of this year can safely be estimated at $1,428,879.65. This gives the total resources of the state to meet all expenditures other than the capitol and federal aid road fund from January 1, 1923 to June 30, 1923, to be $9,245,130.22. The condition of the capitol fund and federal aid road fund will be considered later.

Your committee further finds that the total specific appropriation for the current biennium amounted to $17,214,809.96 of which $12,310,614.71 was expended previous to January 1, 1923, leaving $4,904,195.25 as a maximum expenditure from the specific appropriation to June 30, 1923. To this amount should be added the appropriations of $205,800.00 for legislative expenses. We find that the total amount of receipts to the various cash funds, based on actual receipts for eighteen months and an estimated amount for the last six months of the biennium will approximate $4,648,000.16. From the cash funds there has been an expenditure to the first of January, 1923, of $2,775,282.71 leaving $1,872,717.45 as the total possible expense from cash funds for the last six months of the biennium. These items show that the total maximum expense of the state, other than the capitol fund and federal aid road fund, cannot exceed $6,982,712.72 leaving a surplus of $1,372,304.44 on the 30 of June, 1923.

Balance Sheet.

These facts developed into an operating balance sheet of the state for the period January 1 to June 30, 1923, would be as follows.

Your committee was authorized to investigate the financial condition of the state government and the above report shows without question that sufficient taxes were levied to run the government to the close of this biennium with a safe surplus. It appears to this committee that during the last year it was a wise policy to levy only sufficient taxes to meet the needs of the state government instead of making a larger levy in order to create a greater surplus to be loaned to the banks of the state. With $2,763,303.70 on deposit in the banks of the state on January 1, together with $11,771,919.25 worth of bonds owned by the state and $7,000,000.00 income to the current revenue funds for the next six months it hardly seems possible that the state of Nebraska will not have sufficient funds to meet its bills.

Errors of Governor.

We cannot refrain from calling your attention to the inaccuracies and erroneous deductions of a former report transmitted to the house of representatives on February 14, 1923, dealing with state finances:

In the report above referred to it was stated that "the different units of Nebraska had a bonded indebtedness according to the last biennium report of the state auditor of $73,760,187.00."

We call attention to the fact that this bonded indebtedness is in no way an obligation of the state government and had no place in a discussion of the financial condition of the state government. It represents the bonded indebtedness of the various counties, townships, school districts, cities, villages and irrigation districts. It is a debt for which the state government is in no way responsible, which it did not create, and for which it is not liable. We deem it only fair to say that the inclusion of this item of bonded indebtedness in the report of the finances of the state government was improper and misleading.

Again it was stated: "There was a deficit according to the bills filed with the finance committee in the agricultural department of $75,000." Your committee finds that this statement is wholly untrue and not supported by facts. At the request of farmers' organizations, the appropriation for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis was practically exhausted previous to January 1, 1923. An appropriation bill was introduced in the house of representatives with the emergency clause appropriating $75,000 for the purpose of continuing this activity until the appropriations for the coming biennium were available. No money for this activity was spent in excess of the appropriation and there is no deficit and there can be none.

No Deficit in Normals.

The former report also stated that there was a deficit in the funds for the normal schools. The attached letter from Mr. Dan Morris of Kearney a member of the Normal board, shows this statement to have been wholly untrue.

The item of $640,200.89 as accounts payable on January 1 was also alleged as a deficit in the former report. The accounts payable the first of any month are the current bills not paid and which will be paid out of the appropriations for each department. This committee has considered as a liability the total unexpired balance of the appropriations and to include the accounts payable would simply double the liabilities.

The former statement transmitted to the house also claimed a large deficit in the funds available to pay the road contracts already entered into. In arriving at the figures in that statement no credit was given for the large amount of money still due the state of Nebraska from the federal government to complete the road program entered into by the state of Nebraska. We attach a detailed statement from the department of public works, showing that there will be a cash balance to the credit of this department to the sum of $355,152.91, after all road contracts and other bills have been paid. In attempting to show a deficit in the payment of road contracts, the former report did not take into account any of the money to be received from the federal government or from counties between January 1 and June 30 or later, and which amount will be applied on contracts already let. This amount is $1,622,431.55 and will be available to pay the alleged deficit of $1,167,310.98 contained in the former report.

As alleged deficit of $2,612,292.98 was arrived at in the former report by setting up the supposed deficit of the state and failing to take into account the revenues coming into the state treasurer to meet outstanding obligations. It is a simple matter to show any business concern in poor financial condition by taking into account its obligations and omitting from its financial statement its assets, and this is precisely what the former report did in seeking to show a deficit at the beginning of this calendar year of $2,612,292.98. Of this alleged $2,000,000 deficit $1,096,928.02 was supposed to be in the department of public works for road contracts. We have shown plainly that this was an erroneous statement and we believe that there was no occasion for such a statement having been made, due to the fact that the large amount of federal money still available was pointed out previously to the making of such a report.

No Basis For Prediction.

The statement was also made that at the end of the calendar year 1923, there would be a deficit in the state treasury amounting to $4,040,387.93. This erroneous conclusion is reached by making an estimate of the expenditures of the state from June 30, 1923 to the end of the calendar year. There is no basis for making such an estimate for the reason that the present legislature now in session must make an appropriation to cover this period and the taxes are not levied to cover the appropriations of this legislature until next July, the calendar year 1923, for the reason that no one can tell until the legislature adjourns, what the expenditures will be from July to January or what the revenues will be until the tax levies have been made to cover the period from July 1, 1923 to June 30, 1924. Therefore the statement that there will be $4,040,387.93 deficit at the end of the calendar year is wholly without foundation.

The statement further charges that the general fund was overdrawn on January 4, 1923, to the amount of $875,264.07 and infers that this has not been true heretofore on January 1 of each year. In 1921 eight special tax funds were merged into the general fund and the general fund is charged with carrying the temporary university, special university activity, institution improvements, university buildings, state normal, state aid bridges, and state aid funds. The reason that the general fund is overdrawn is fully set forth in the letter of the State Accountant, C. A. Sommer, to the committee, showing that under the present law appropriations from this fund are available for expenditure some six to ten months prior to the time that the money is actually received by the state treasurer. This means that the cash fund in the hands of the treasurer must carry the overdrafts in this fund.

Hall Had "Overdraft."

This situation has prevailed in the state treasury since 1913, for on January 1, 1919, at the close of Treasurer George E. Hall's term, the tax funds were overdrawn $443,202.24. This same system prevailed during the first term of Mr. Hall's, 1917-18, where it is shown by his report for that biennium, page 7, wherein he says: "During the previous biennium I paid and carried as cash on hand all warrants on a number of funds in excess of the amount of such funds received." In other words, he was carrying as cash, warrants which had actually been paid and which actually represented an overdraft against the respective funds on which these warrants were drawn.

We also find that in addition to the deficiency in the state treasury at the endof Mr. Hall's term, the legislature of 1919 was called upon to appropriate. $325,000.00 deficiency claims for the previous administration.

Under the present system the biennium closes on July 1 of each year. At this time the taxes have been largely collected and credited to the respective funds and a balance may be drawn. This is an ideal arrangement so far as the state government is concerned. At the close of the present biennium July 1, 1923, the various overdrafts in these respective funds will be wiped out and all funds will be intact. For a full explanation of the question of overdrafts in the office of the state treasurer, the committee makes reference to the letter of Mr. C. A. Sommer, state accountant, to the committee under date of February 23, 1923, hereto attached.

Your committee further finds that there should be no deficiency in any of the departments during this biennium if the expenditures the last six months of the biennium does not exceed the rate of expenditures incurred during the first eighteen months. Up to January 1, or during the first eighteen months, 72 per cent of the appropriations were spent, leaving one-fourth for the last six months. The responsibility for raising sufficient revenue to meet the appropriations rests with the state board of equalization, composed of elected constitutional officers. The expending agencies must stay within their appropriations but are not charged with any responsibility of providing sufficient revenues.

Among the exhibits is a letter from Dan Morris of the state normal board stating that in February the normal board found it could get along with the present appropriations without a deficit and that a bill introduced by Gould in the house had been withdrawn.

A letter by C. A. Sommer, state accountant, stating that the joint committee had overcharged itself with about $1,000,000 expense of the state government was also made a part of the record.

"CUPID'S WAY"

By Fay Stevenson

(Copyrigh, 1923, by New York World.)

Between Two Fires.

Muriel sat reading a new book of poems Landis had given her when Dr. Kent entered the room quietly, kissed her lightly and sat down beside her.

"Oh, what a fright you gave me," gasped Muriel, quickly closing the book and giving her full attention. "George, I had a feeling that you weren't coming tonight."

"Did I ever disappoint you?"

"I thought you might decide to call upon that flashy widow," she pouted.

"So that's why you and Landis left so hurriedly? You were jealous, were you?"

"I was."

Dr. Kent chuckled to himself. He liked to think he had given her cause for jealousy. For a moment he almost wished he could pretend he cared for the petite widow whom he had met that night, but he was too earnest and sincere a nature to play such a role even for a few minutes.

"My darling you know there isn't a woman in the world who could interest me but you."

For a moment his sentiment touched her. He was so big, so open hearted, so utterly unworthy of a girl who loved another man. And yet, she wasn't certain that this other man, Landis, loved her.

She was between two fires.

Landis seemed devoted to her, read sentimental poetry by the hour with her, thought her thoughts and dreamed her dreams. But did he love her? Did he ever intend to make a place for her in the world? There was nothing definite to pin one's faith to, nothing secure, protective.

Dr. Kent was seldom sentimental, seldom appealed to her higher senses. She had never risen to the clouds with him, but his firmness upon this earth was a decided score in his favor. He held forth a sheltered existence, a protecting arm and a quiet, sane, unemotional future.

Dr. Kent loved her and she knew it. Landis loved her and held her up as his ideal woman, but did he love her enough to sacrifice and sweat and work for her?

"We mustn't continue our dreams too long, our 'engaged fairyland dreams,' as you call them, Muriel," Dr. Kent said as if reading her mind. "Sometimes I feel like taking the initiative and insisting that you marry me this June."

She smiled rather wearily.

"The trouble is I'm too considerate of you," continued the doctor smiling gently. "I should have been more assertive, forbidden you to see Landis and insisted upon you setting a definite date for the wedding."

They were silent a few minutes; then Dr. Kent turned impulsively to her. "Muriel, I'm not coming to see you any more," he declared. "Don't flash back that I intend to see the widow, you know very well that my love belongs to you, but I'm going to give you a chance to decide this Landis affair. You don't know your own heart. I don't believe he knows his. I'm going to let you struggle along by yourselves. When you have made the great choice you may tell me."

Before she realized what had happened Dr. Kent was gone.

DAMAGES FOR FANNIE HOPE

AWARDED $1,000 IN CASE AGAINST FAIRBURY MAN.

Charged Elmer E. Faris With Libelous Forty-Page Book and Letters to Friends in Her Home Town.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., March 17.—The jury in the case of Miss Fannie Hope against Elmer E. Faris of Fairbury, Neb., returned a verdict awarding the plaintiff $900 punitive damages and $100 actual damages.

Attorney Allan May, for the defense in the $75,000 damage-libel suit of Miss Fanny Hope of Maryville, Mo., against Elmer E. Faris of Fairbury, declined to submit any testimony for his client when the plaintiff had rested late Wednesday, and argued to the court that at the time the letters complained of by the plaintiff were written by Faris concerning Miss Hope, they were married and that therefore a libel suit between husband and wife cannot be brought. They also contended that the letters were not published and that they did not damage Miss Hope.

At the opening of the trial by the defense demurrers filed by the defendant against that part of the petition charging libel in accusation of larceny and immorality were sustained by Federal Judge Reeves. The suit originally comprised three counts and $25,000 was demanded on each count. Sustaining of the demurrers left onl ythe libel charge resulting from alleged accusations of perjury.

Miss Hope testified at length on her behalf. She related the story of her life before, during and after her marriage to Faris, saying she first met Faris while she was teaching school. In her classes were seven of Faris' children by a former marriage. After their marriage they lived for a time on Faris' farm near Fairbury, following an eight months' honeymoon on the Pacific coast. She is now living with her invalid mother, seventy-six years old. Miss Hope is a large woman of dignified appearance, was dressed entirely in black and seemed much embarrassed.

In her petition she alleged Faris charged her with larceny of $1,000 in war savings stamps and an insurance policy. Her attorney opened by asking her if she ever placed $1,000 worth of savings stamps in her private box. "Yes, sir," she answered, "two days preceding our marriage, at his request." She replied in the negative when asked if she had any interest in it, Miss Hope stating she had done so to the box. She testified Faris transferred a life insurance policy to her but that she had never seen it. "Did you steal it from him?" she was asked. "No, sir," was her reply. Another question that elicited numerous "Ahs" from the crowded court room was:

"Did you ever refuse to accept the responsibility of motherhood?"

"I did not," she answered.

Several features of the trial related to slight domestic difficulties, one of which referred to the plaintiff taking her mother to her home in Maryville after Faris had refused to consent to alleged. It was also alleged in these and left a note apprising him of her departure.

Several witnesses from her home town testified to receiving copies of a forty-page book containing charges against Miss Hope, and of letters. These witnesses admitted the charges at the time had a tendency to the opinion that Miss Hope's character was not very good if the statements were true. The testimony of O. L. Curl, now prosecuting attorney of Nodaway county, Kan., was typical of them all. Curl testified that when he received a copy of the book he did not know Miss Hope and that after reading it he had the opinion that Miss Hope's character was not very good, if the statements in the book were true; adding that since the book contained extracts of a brief prepared by a lawyer and used in a supreme court, he, as a lawyer, accepted its statements. "So you believed the statements in it?" he was asked. "Yes, sir," was the reply.

"But you do not now believe that your client is guilty of the charges made against her?"

"Not now." Curl stated that since he became acquainted with Miss Hope he knew she could not be guilty of the charges made against her.

Miss Hope while on the stand identified eleven letters which figured in the case. The plaintiff contended that after the divorce was granted hr the ex-husband wrote letters attacking the morals of the ex-wife. Numerous acts of impropriety were alleged. It was alsoalleged in these letters that Miss Hope stole papers belonging to him and that she was guilty of perjury in her testimony in the divorce hearing; of immorality and embezzlement.

COLD WEATHER IS COMING

Snow Predicted for Many Sections With Frosts Probable in Florida and Along Gulf Coast.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Abnormally cold weather thruout the United States will precede the theoretical arrival of spring next Wednesday, the weather bureau forecast today.

Beginning tomorrow night, a cold wave will blanket almost the entire nation and continue until the time spring is due to arrive. Snow is predicted for many sections with frosts probable in Florida and along the gulf coast. Spring's debut on Wednesday is expected to be the signal for warmer weather, which will continue during the latter part of the week.

SOVIETS LIKE U. S. MOVIES.

MOSCOW, (By mail)—The Russia movie public takes strongly to the American film, especially detective stories and films showing daring daring cowboy or cowgirl adventures.

At the same time, American films hold third place in the movie houses. German films come first and Italian second. The censor has full powers and is ruthless. He throws out ultra-religious and counter-revolutionary films promptly. Placards and advertising pictures are subject to the same censorship.

YOUR - - - PROBLEMS

By Mary Gordon

Dear Mary Gordon: In reading tonight's paper I became very interested in Sappho. I'm going to make a proposition. Sappho! will you come and live with me for just one month? I'm just a young widow of twenty-five and have two kiddies at home. I'm badly in need of a girl—or maid you'd probably say—and can't get one. I'm dreadfully poor, but so proud, all I'd ask of you would just be kind enough not to be a snob.

You have an allowance so I'll not offer you wages, altho I'll expect you to do all my work while I'm gone. This would help me to get a month's start, and you would surely find out if all of life is love.

Everything would just be the reverse of what you are accustomed to. Are you game? I'll forbid "sheiks" and wild parties, tho for that month.

We might make a regular fairy tale out of this. Who knows? I shall be in Lincoln Monday and leave my name at the Journal office. I was going to plan and meet you on some corner if you'd meet me, then I wondered if all the Journal readers wouldn't be on that corner trying to find out who we were. Please meet me and look me over at any rate.—Mrs. C.

A. I am printing this letter out of its turn (there's a whole drawer full waiting to be used) because you seem so in earnest, Mrs. C. I'm sure the experience would be a good one for Sappho. She didn't send me her address or name, however.

Sappho, if you want to take advantage of this offer,—and I feel sure it would be good for you to see how other less fortunate (or should I say more?) live—'phone me and I shall see that you meet Mrs. C.

Dear Mary Gordon: Its been quite a while since I've written to you, but after reading the last letter Jess wrote you, I decided to write a little myself about my opinions of the modern girl. I think your all right Jess, to my notion you have a lot of good common sense. There's just one little thing I can't quite agree about, and that's the kissing question. Now don't throw up your hands and exclaim "Oh there comes a dear little reformer to save the young people who have been saved too much already." Because I'd be willing to bet that I'm even younger than you are, as I'm only in high school and not a senior either. But this is my point. I've been kissed, yes, more than once, too, but believe me I've come to the conclusion that it doesn't pay.

There is not, (except in rare instances) such a thing as a kiss of respect, between a young boy and girl. No matter how respectful a kiss starts out to be, in my experience, it always ends up with a good deal of sentimentality attached. And I'll bet if the boys would give their honest opinions, they would say that they think a lot more of the girls who don't offer their lips to every boy they happen to "date" with.

Now, I've had a good many "dates" with many varieties of boys and still I do believe that there is such a thing as being just pals. It's true that you have to kiss a lot of boys to keep them interested, but if a girl's willing to wait. I do think that some time she will meet a boy who is not going with a girl for the mere reason that he wishes to be sentimental. But then I've taken up too much space already. And no doubt Jess is just dying to tell me what a prude I am and a lot more besides.

Well come right along Jess, I'm waiting for you, because to be truly honest I like to hear your ideas and know of many others who feel the same way. Write and tell me what you think anyway.—Billy.

A. You're a wise girl, Billy. Keep your sense of values.

And come again.

Dear Mary Gordon: I for one am for the modern girl. I bet that 75 per cent of the modern girls of today can cook. I for one can. Just because we girls like to powder and paint that is not a sign we can not cook. I bet if "Lincoln" went into the homes of the said flappers at meal time he would see them with an apron on working. I think it is too bad "Lincoln" did not live in the days of '75. Maybe he would find a girl he would like.

I would like to ask "Lincoln" what objections he has to bobbed haid. It is comfortable and cool in the summer. I would like to ask him how it would be for him and all other men to wear long hair. I bet at the end of one week it would be cut off. He would probably say, that is not the style for men. Well it is the style for girls to wear bobbed hair so why can't we? What is fair for the goose is fair for the gander.

I think that "Lincoln" will have to go elsewhere than "Lincoln" if he expects to find very many girls who don't powder or paint and are good looking. I would like to see "Lincoln" once just to see what an old "spinster" he is. I sure hope that I have not taken up too much space.—Billy.

A. The "Billy's" are on the job today, aren't they? Both ardent feminists. That's right, girls, you can't expect others to stand up for you if you don't give yourselves a good word now and then.

Shall I tell you a secret? I saw a picture of "Lincoln" the other day—he's a fine looking chap with rather blond hair that would like to curl—sort of artistic. Don't you all envy that girl with the scrub brush?

Dear Mary Gordon: Will you kindly give me complete information as to the preparation and submission of a manuscript? I wish to know the kind of paper one must use, whether or not a letter should accompany the story, in fact all the necessary details pertaining to the customary procedure.—An American Soldier.

A. The manuscript should be typed, on one side of the paper. Your name and address should be placed in the upper left-hand corner. The pages should be numbered and the number of words in the article specified in the upper right-hand corner. It should be folded, never rolled. A self-addressed envelope with the required number of stamps should be enclosed in case of rejection. It is well to write a short note to the editor.

As to the remainder of your letter, I cannot open such a controversy in these columns. I referred it to the editor of the Public Mind and he said he could not use it, unless you sign your name to the article.

Brown Sugar Fudge.

Put in sauce pan 1 pound sugar, 1-2 cup water. When they start to boil add 1 tablespoon of butter, 1-2 teaspoon cream tartar. Let boil until soft balls form in cold water. Take from fire, let stand from 3 to 5 minutes, add a pinch salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla and 1 cup nuts. Beat until it starts to harden, then pour on buttered plate and cut in squares.

RAISE POINT WITH RESPECT TO LIBEL

Lawyer Insists Truth Is Always Complete Defense in a Civil Action for Damages and Asks Such Ruling.

The supreme court is asked, in a brief filed Saturday, to hold that the truth is a complete defense to a civil action for libel. The state constitution says that all actions, civil and criminal, the truth, when printed from good motives and for justifiable ends, frees those who print it from any liability. H. F. Rose, who appears for the World Herald, H. E. Newbranch, its editor, and B. F. Sylvester, its city editor, maintains that this constitutional provision is merely a limitation upon the legislature, and that it is not necessary for his clients to show that good motives and justifiable ends were back of their printing what Thomas B. Murray objected to so long as it was true.

Murray was assistant city prosecutor at a time when the city of Omaha was in the throes of a big city election battle. The World-Herald was championing the Dahlman ticket and the News the Sutton ticket. Murray was backing the latter group. He caused the arrest of a number of men he said were floaters and who had been planted in various wards for the purposes of fraud and corruption. Thereupon the World-Herald went after him, accusing him of using his position to terrorize poor men who intended to vote for Mayor Jim and to scare them away from the polls.

Murray sued for $50,000 damages, and a jury gave him $2,000. The World-Herald pleaded that what it said was true; that Murray had given an interview to his friendly newspaper saying a few prosecutions would bluff out thousands of fraudulent voters, and that its editorial, news story and cartoon were based on this statement, which it assumed to be true, which the man who got it swore was true and that as it appeared in a friendly paper and Murray had not denied it, its defense was complete.

The specific legal question upon which affirmance hangs it whether the fact that what is published is true is a complete defense and that only false libels are punishable, and the newspaper claims that the constitutional provision means only that no legislature could ever deprive the people from printing the truth with good motives and justifiable ends.

ADMITS $100,000 FRAUD

Manager of Cedar Rapids Lumber Company, Held in Jail, Makes Confession.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., March 17.—E. H. Reimers, former manager of the Keve Lumber company here was arrested last night and is being held in the county jail in default of $10,000 bond, charged with embezzlement of $100,000 of the company's funds.

When questioned by county and state officials last night Reimers said:

"I am going to plead guilty because I am guilty."

Remiers was arrested in a local hotel where he had registered under an assumed name and grilled for three hours in the office of County Attorney Barngrover. The man broke down and made a confession in full covering his operations.

After having dissipated his own small fortune in operations on the board of trade, according to the confession, Reimers dipped into the company's funds in an effort to recoup his losses and covered the speculations by a clever juggling of his books.

Disregarding the advice of friends, Reimers was caught in the falling market following the war, and in desperation used over $100,000 of the company's funds in his attempt to make a "clean up" which would enable him to square his accounts.

One official of the company, during a casual investigation of the company's banking funds, discovered what appeared to be a discrepancy. Reimers was informed of the discovery and that day, March 9, he disappeared. Yesterday he returned to this city, registering in a local hotel under the name of Wilson, where he was arrested last night.

He was taken before the county attorney, arraigned before Judge Lightner and waived to the grand jury. This morning he will appear in district court and plead guilty to larceny by embezzlement. Bonds were fixed in the sum of $10,000, which he was unable to furnish.

The Keve Lumber company is a firm with headquarters here since 1917 and operates fourteen lumber yards thruout Iowa, Nebraska and other neighboring states.

YEAR'S WAR FOR IRELAND

SIXTY-SEVEN REPUBLICANS EXECUTED SINCE MARCH 17, 1922.

Thirteen Thousand Were Imprisoned and 5,000 Released—2,000 Conducting Guerilla Warfare at Present.

DUBLIN, March 17.—Sixty-seven republicans executed.

Thirteen thousand imprisoned, of whom 5,000 have been released.

Two thousand insurgents conducting guerilla warfare at present.

Thirty thousand national troops under arms, hunting from hamlet to hamlet the last remnants of a once powerful rebel army.

The above is the official account of the situation this St. Patrick's day furnished by the free state government as the first year of its rule closes.

A year ago today Eamonn de Valera issued a proclamation declaring civil war would follow creation of the free state. Ten days later the Irish free state bill passed its third reading, in the house of lords, became an act and received royal assent.

Peace with Ulster followed within three days. Michael Collins and Sir James Craig signing an armistice agreement. Its troubles with the north at an end, the free state struggled into being, harassed by insurgents who followed Eamonn de Valera in open rebellion. At that time there were two outstanding figures, not counting de Valera, on either side—Michael Collins and Arthur Griffith, mainstays of the free state; Erskine Childers, "brains" of the rebels, and Rory O'Connor, fiery military leaders. All are dead. Griffith died of a sudden illness and within a month Michael Collins was assassinated. Since that time O'Connor and Childers have been caught and executed.

The free state government today is confident it has the situation better in hand than at any time since its establishment. Rebellion is being steadily stamped out.

Only Eamonn de Valera, will o' the wisp "president of the Irish republic" remains at large. With his eventual capture or flight from the country, President Liam Cosgrave is confident an era of peace and prosperity will be born out of Erin's troubles.

IDENTIFY MUTILATED BODY

Geneva, Ill., Victim Declared to Be Edward McBride, Gunman, Bootlegger and Convict.

CHICAGO, March 17.—The mutilated body found buried in the snow near Geneva, Ill., a month ago, was positively identified today as that of Edward McBride, gunman, bootlegger and escaped convict. McBride was last officially reported when he jumped from a train while being taken to San Quentin penitentiary in California. He was wanted as an escaped convict.

Authorities believe friends of Edward Morris, now serving a life sentence for the murder of Policeman Edward Mullen, may have killed McBride. Morris was convicted when his former friend, McBride, "squealed" and turned state's evidence.

The identification was made by Police Lieutenant William Stapleton, who knew McBride intimately.

ALFALFA COSTS BIG MONEY

When Nebraska Product Is Shipped to Florida the Buyer Is Out $41 a Ton.

A Kearney firm loaded a carload of Buffalo county alfalfa hay, at Elm Creek this week for shipment to a large tobacco plantation at Jupiter, Fla. This hay, loaded at the prevailing market quotation at Elm Creek, will cost the buyer $41 per ton by the time it reaches its destination. To begin with, the hay brought $20 per ton, being the choice of third cutting, the railroads getting the balance. Hay dealers declare that long distance shipments of Buffalo county alfalfa are not infrequent, in fact little of the best grade of hay is consumed within the state.—Ravenna News.

Good Night Stories

by Blanche Silver

Illustrated by Neva Harrison

DAVID HEARS A STRANGE HISTORY.

DAVID just couldn't seem to get interested in his studies, but sat at his desk biting on his slate-pencil, when a queer noise startled him.

"Please! Please!" cried a tiny voice, and David looked out in the aisle. "Thank you very much," continued the tiny voice. "It isn't very nice to be eaten, you know."

Here David laughed and pulled a big red apple out of his desk. He couldn't think of anything else he had that he could eat, so he supposed of course it must be the apple talking.

But when he spoke to it, the tiny voice answered from his hand and David's eyes opened with wonder when he saw the end of his slate-pencil nod back at him.

"My goodness gracious!" exclaimed David, rubbing his eyes. "I thought my slate-pencil nodded at me. Wasn't that funny?"

"Nothing funny about that," laughed the slate-pencil, and David almost jumped out of his seat. "What is there funny about my shaking my head at you? I was frightened because I thought you were going to bite my head off. It reminded me of a time when I was just a wee little sliver of slate, part of a big hill."

"Here! Here!" laughed David, his eyes fairly dancing. "I believe you're going to tell me a fairy story. Who ever heard of a slate-pencil being a hill! Ha! Ha! Ha!" and David laughed right out loud.

"Well, I suppose it does seem funny to you," replied the slate-pencil. "But nevertheless it's true. When I first opened my eyes—I mean the one thing I remember about my early life—I was a tiny sliver of slate, part of a big rock that made up the greater part of a hill. The sun shone on me, the birds sang over me, and I was the happiest little slate boy you can imagine. Then one day some men who had been busy nearby, working in what they called the 'slate quarry,' came along.

"My, how they banged and hacked at

"What Happened Next?"

my mother, my brothers and sisters and myself!"

"Were you dreadfully frightened?" asked David, all interest.

"At first," laughed the slate-pencil boy. "But my mother whispered to me that it was all right—that sooner or later all good slate boys went out into the big world to help."

"Dear me!" exclaimed Dicky. "What happened next?"

"Well," replied the slate-pencil, looking very wise and experienced, "I was jostled and pushed, and bumped and banged until at last I found myself made into a lovely slate-pencil.

"At first things happened so swiftly I didn't like it, but now that I've found what a great deal of good I can do, I'm perfectly happy and contented. Why, I wouldn't go back to my other life for anything."

The slate-pencil paused to shake his head. Then he went on:

"Now all I ask of you is to be careful not to let me fall on the floor and break my back, until you've learned all your letters and numbers. After that it won't be so bad. But little boys and girls who don't know the history of us slate-pencil boys, are not always careful of us. Oh, I could tell you wonderful tales about my life."

Here the teacher rapped on her desk and called David up to his lesson. He whispered good-by to the slate-pencil boy and carefully laid him down so he wouldn't roll off the desk and break—for David was eager to learn more of the little slate-pencil's stories.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

What Madge Saw on the Long Deserted Road.

MY small son drew back from my embrace, and looked at me with the wide-eyed adorable gaze which is his when he wishes to establish some fact firmly in his mind.

"Mama tum back today?" he demanded.

"Perhaps," I answered, with a hopelessly perjured feeling. "If I can find something pretty for you."

"Don't want someting pretty. Want my mama," he returned with an obstinacy which thrilled me, and made my flight doubly difficult. Every second was precious, however, if I meant to get away, and I sent an appealing glance at Katie across his curly head.

She seized the cue promptly.

"O! Ba-bee!" she shrilled in apparent excitement. Lillian declares Katie will call Junior "Ba-bee" on his wedding day. "I see Jeem going by schicken house. I bet he going feed dose leetle schickens. Let's run qveeck."

Even a mother's going away or return was not proof against that lure. Junior joyously allowed himself to be lifted out of the car to the ground, and the only glance I permitted my suddenly wet eyes showed him trotting across the pasture with his hand tucked confidingly in Katie's.

"Mrs. Durkee, Marvin."

With fingers that trembled, but did not impede my movements, I took off the old sweater in which I had driven out of the farm gate, and quickly donned my hat, coat and heavy driving coat. Then I sent my car racing down the road, finding the first relief from the tension of the last hour in the swift rush of cold air against my face, and the sensation of flying through space which fast motoring always gives me.

There had been no opportunity for me to make any plan as to my future movements, when Dicky's outrageous taunts concerning Tom Chester had driven me, raging, into flight. In the envelope addressed to Lillian which I had left with Katie I had scrawled but a few words.

"Must get away. Don't waste time looking for me. Will get in touch with you as soon as possible, and will be careful. MADGE."

In Katie's envelope there was but a single line of three words:

"Mrs. Durkee, Marvin."

For my little friend and former neighbor was the only person I could call to mind whom I could trust with the secret of my address. Garrulous, like a charming child in many ways, yet she is the most loyal person in the world, and a secret entrusted to her is safer than the grave.

Madge Is Terrified.

I did not intend to stay with Mrs. Durkee longer than the night, which would be almost upon me at the end of my present ride. And if Edith Fairfax had been a member of her household I could not have availed myself even of that shelter.

But when I had unexpectedly met Mrs. Durkee in Hambel's grill room, she had said that Edith expected to go to Aunt Dora Paige's southern home "very soon," and later had defined that time as the next day. Therefore, I felt safe in throwing myself upon the hospitality of my little friend, and I meant to send her the address by which she could reach me, as soon as I knew it myself.

What I should do when on the next morning I should leave her friendly roof, what course I should pursue in carrying out my angry determination to shut out Dicky from my future life, I had no more idea than had the rabbit which scurried across the road just missing destruction.

Resolutely I tried to put all such considerations aside until my journey's end, knowing that my first job was to drive my car as fast as was consistent with safety, and I tried to think of some topic, absorbing enough to banish the other, and yet not so obsessing as to take my mind from the wheel.

The thought of Mrs. Durkee supplied it. With a quick awakening of interest, I remembered the allusions she had made to Bess Dean, and the unhappiness she was causing gentle Leila Durkee. I was glad that my own emergency would give me an evening in the same house with Alfred and Leila Durkee.

With instincts sharpened by the memory of the catty things my former colleagues in the Bayview high school had tried to do to me, I felt that I might perhaps find some way to thwart Bess Dean's petty meanness.

I was aroused to casual interest by the approach of a car far down the road. It was the first car I had seen—I had remarked to myself how deserted the road was. But as it came closer toward me, I gripped my wheel in terror.

Surely I was not mistaken—it was the gray limousine which had trailed my taxi on Fifth avenue.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

Are You Planning a Flower Garden for This Summer?

By WANDA BARTON

SO many things are happening in your garden that in order not to miss anything it is well to renew your intimacy with it between spring-weather squalls.

Close reading of gaudy flower catalogues has inspired us with ambition to have a finer garden than ever. It is often that way under the lamplight. But here is advice from an old gardener. Don't plan more work than you can do. Calculate your time. Remember the labor required for the cultivation of the things you are writing on the order slip. Give a thought to what will do best in the space you have. Don't get plants that need broad sunlight if you must put them where they get it in short rations. Don't neglect the charming iris family if you have a place with part shade, in which they love to grow.

The wise gardener dug his, or her sweet-pea trench last fall, fourteen inches deep, a foot and a half wide, and as long as space permitted, enriched it, then lightly covered it with meadow hay or straw. Now there is nothing to do but put up the trellis before the wee vines come up. Plant the seed any time after the middle of March. Then as the plants grow slowly fill in the dirt around them. This makes sturdy sweet peas with long-stemmed blooms that will last until the latter part of August if constantly picked.

The little wooden markers topped by the seed envelopes seem like small sentinels placed at the ends of the freshly made beds.

The first garden work is the raking and burning of the winter's trash, leaves and broken branches. These should be burned on a spot where the ashes may be turned under with the first spading.

In preparing for a rose garden at least two and a half feet should be allowed between the bushes, and the habits of each rose bush to be planted carefully studied. This enables the gardener to arrange the bushes in the most symmetrical way.

The catalogue doesn't always call attention to this need, but experience teaches the fact in time.

In planting shrubs, try to plant them with an eye to succession in their blooming or fancy leafing periods. The wise gardener plans so that there is always something of interest to be seen in his garden.

Remember that the climbing geranium is beautiful only on the sunny side, as all the leaves turn that way. So in building the trellis for its support, plan to have something growing on the reverse side.

The Star of Bethlehem makes an attractive mat at the base of one of the early flowering shrubs. For the flowers, set among the green spiky leaves, though closing at night, are lovely during the day.

Coleus, or other plants in pots or boxes, should be all ready to replace the hyacinths and crocuses when they go.

Cannas from seed should be started early in the house to give them a month or six weeks' growth before setting them out. The bulbs or tubers may be planted quite early after the danger of frost is passed. Watch the tulip bed. Uncover it in the middle of the day and cover it at night until it is safe to leave it uncovered all the time.

In arranging garden beds it is well to remember that narrow beds are easier for cultivation than broad beds. Old beds should be opened up deeply and the fertilizer placed under the top dressing to get the best use of it.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY —AND HER'S

WHAT more appropriate happening could fall upon a more auspicious day, than that which comes to pass when he—whose forebears have always celebrated the day with special rejoicing—makes THIS day forever memorable by asking the question for which her "Yes" has long been ready? Somehow it seems as though Cupid had—with elfin magic—transformed their hopes into reality with a special Shamrock shadow fancy on this day of days for them!

WINIFRED BLACK Writes About St. Patrick's Day

Winifred Black

THE top of the morning to ye, shure and it's a fine old saint ye are, St. Patrick, and a broth of a boy you must have been in your day of it. Why, the very snakes were afraid of you!

St. Patrick's day—to be sure I observe it! Why not?

Me for a green ribbon and a sprig of shamrock and a little dudheen for my dinner table tonight, and lettuce in the green bowl and coffee in the little green cups—and there's not a drop of Irish blood in all my veins.

I love all the old holidays—be they Irish or French, or English or Italian or American.

May Day—that came to us from England. Is there anything like it with its flowers and its garlands and its baskets?

The fall of the Bastile—what fun it is to go to the French picnic and listen to the voluble French tongue and borrow a bit from a bud of garlic to rub over the slice of French bread. And perhaps just a sup—ah, well, who knows?

St. Andrew and his day—what a swirl of bagpipes, what a brave swinging of the kilts and what a gay parade of plaids!

Columbus Day—why, everyone of us honors the brave Italian who discovered our land!

The Fourth of July—that's the good old American day! I hope we'll never forget it as long as there's such a thing as America.

It does us good to go back for an hour or so to the brave history of our brave country.

Variety's "The Life"

No, I don't care for this modern fad which says we should all love all countries as well as we love our own.

It sounds very broad and liberal, and very tolerant and noble—but somehow it never seems to work.

I don't care a great deal for a man who doesn't love his own country above all other countries, and his own home above all other homes, and his own friends above the friends of everybody else on earth.

There isn't much red blood in a man who likes his neighbor's mother as well as he likes his own, and he doesn't have to have a mother complex to feel that way about it, either.

This is a big, vague, lonesome kind of universe when you come to think of it—what with the stars and the moon, and the wind and the sea all so big and far away and mysterious, somehow, and the cities crowded to the very edge of them with puzzled, worried, anxious, lonesome people—and the great wide plains with nobody in them and the wide mountains peopled with wild animals—and the wail the wind cries in the chimney at night and the sad sounds of the waves when they keep trying to get close enough to the shore to get acquainted—the crying of the sea-gulls always looking — hunting—searching—yes, it's a big lonesome world and we need all the friendly comfort and neighborly contact we can get out of it.

And I believe in the family and in the home, and in the state and in the nation and in the race—not in any narrow, mean, envious, bigoted way—but I believe in the differences between us, and I like to see them.

Roses are beautiful flowers—there's nothing like a rose, is there? But the violets are sweet, too, and the mignonette and the yellow broom—how brave and gay it flaunts its banner! I wouldn't thank anybody for changing my fuchsias into roses, and my heliotrope into lilies.

Each flower has its place and its beauty and its home—why not love them all—each in its way?

What a dull world this would be if we all sung the same song and read the same books and thought the same thoughts!

Here's a Welcome

I hope I shall never live to see that day.

So here's a welcome to ye, St. Patrick, and all that's before you and behind you—the mist of the Irish sea, the beat of the bold Irish heart, the songs of the old Irish history—shure, it's welcome ye are—the day!

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SUNDAY AND MONDAY, MARCH 18-19.

Sunday's horoscope holds some promise of interesting affairs as they relate to ecclesiastical and spiritual matters. In a social or romantic way, there may be developments of a sensational nature. Discretion is urged in these matters.

Those whose birthday it is have the augury of a lively year in social and domestic matters, with business moving in the customary grooves. A child born on this day will be kind and generous and will succeed best in the employment of others.

Monday's astrological reading may be troublesome with anxieties and worry in business and the prospect of a sudden change, which may bring disappointment. The health may be a matter of grave concern and should be given attention. In social and domestic affairs there may be some activity.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of annoyance and worry, with the health proving a matter of concern. A child born on this day will be successful and popular.

YOUR HEALTH

How "Rheumatoid Arthritis" May Be Given Real Relief

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

SOME ailments are persistently hidden from the doctor. There is a natural reticence about speaking of them. There are others, however, which are shown the doctor immediately on their discovery.

One such condition is enlargement of the joints. Everybody has a horror of deformities, especially if they take such forms as to be noticeable to others.

Enlargement of the joints is due to a disease called "rheumatoid arthritis." It is an inflammation of the joint tissues. There are found irritation and thickening of the joint structures and thickening of the ligaments of the joints.

As you would expect, this trouble is first observed [illegible] when the smaller joints of the hands, particularly of the fingers, are affected. In the beginning there may be redness, swelling, heat and tenderness. More likely, however, the joints will become increasingly stiff and swollen, without any soreness. Marked deformity may occur without a symptom of pain or inflammatory disturbance.

Of course, the trouble is not confined to the hands. It may involve all the joints of the body. There is sometimes creaking or groaning of the joints in movement. There may be marked deformity, due to bone displacement following severe inflammation.

There is an acute type in which there are great swelling, pain and fever. This is more commonly met in young women. For that matter, all the forms of rheumatoid arthritis are more likely to attack young women than other folks. While it appears at any age, it comes oftenest between the ages of 18 and 40.

This disease is like every other one—the way is prepared for its onset by any run-down condition of health. Acute illness, worry, grief, misfortune—all these are factors. Bad housing, overcrowding, poor food, lack of sunlight and all the other violations of hygienic living may be followed by an attack of rheumatoid arthritis. Gout and rheumatism predispose to it.

There are some who look upon arthritis as a manifestation of tuberculosis. There is considerable doubt of this, and no one need worry over this possibility, because it is purely a local affair anyway.

There are forms of arthritis due to infection from pus-producing germs. It may follow the acute infectious disease, tonsilitis and other infections.

There is yet another form met in children. This one has fever, enlargement of the spleen and anemia. The joint attack in this case is merely a symptom of an ailment which is called "Still's disease."

In the treatment, first attention is given the general health. Food, exercise, fresh air and out-of-door life are important.

If means will permit, a sojourn in a warm, dry climate will help. But it isn't necessary to go to all this trouble and expense, because a life can be so governed in any climate as to provide the natural elements essential to improved health.

Massage, the various light treatments and medication will help, but they must be directed by your doctor.

Answers to Health Questions

A. T. K. Q—I am a boy 17 years old and am 5 feet 4 inches tall. My legs seem to be very short. Is there any way I can increase the length of my limbs?

2—I walk 10 blocks in the morning and in the evening. Do you think this would cause the lack of development?

A—It is very difficult to increase one particular part of the body. However, stretching exercises, such as bending over trying to touch the floor without flexing the knees, might be helpful. If possible, join a Y. M. C. A. and have the physical director outline a course of exercises for you.

2—No. Exercise in the open air is beneficial. If you can you should walk twice or three times as much each day.

A READER. Q—I have been afflicted with rheumatism. After I was able to walk around after the last attack my left leg was shorter than the right. Will you kindly tell me whether this can be overcome?

A—With proper exercising and massaging, I am sure that your condition will improve. Consult an orthopedist or go to an orthopedic hospital clinic and they will advise you after an examination.

• • •

H. M. Q—Will a vaccine injection clear the face of pimples, and if so where can it be obtained?

A—Vaccine treatment is not guaranteed as a cure for this condition. However, you might consult a skin specialist or one of the large hospital clinics for an examination and advice.

• • •

A READER. Q—My kidney has been out of place for about six months. Will you kindly tell me what causes this condition and whether an operation of this kind is dangerous?

A—This condition is caused by strain. Kidney fixation is not a difficult operation nor more dangerous than most major operations.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

We are three young women who are very much in doubt as to the proper way to introduce a man and woman. Is this correct? "Miss Smith, this is Mr. Jones."

We graduated from high school the same year, and have taught school for the last ten years. We have suddenly decided that it would be much more worth while to get married than teach. There are three young men that we frequently see, but have no way to meet. Would it be proper to speak to them without an introduction?

WE THANK YOU.

WE THANK YOU: Your form of introduction is correct.

It is not only vulgar but dangerous to make the acquaintance of men in the way of which you speak.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of 19. I am in love with a young man one year my senior. My father does not allow me to go with him. I feel that I am old enough to know my own heart, and I realize the fact that I love him and cannot live without him.

Would you advise me to run away and marry him without my father's consent? SHORTY.

SHORTY: Don't do such a silly thing as to run away and get married. Wait until you are older. Perhaps your father will not object to this young man then.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a young girl, and would like to know whether it would be right to accept a pair of gloves from a young man. MARY JANE.

MARY JANE: It would be proper for you to accept the gloves from the young man, my dear, but flowers, candy and books are better.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of 19, but not very attractive. I went with a young man for six months, and was to have married him. Then we had a very bad quarrel, and we have not made up yet. I have not been going out anywhere for fear he might call and I would not be there. I wish you could tell me what is best for me to do. ROB

BOB: Why don't you ask the young man to come and see you? Have a nice talk with him, and see if you cannot adjust matters. This is the womanly thing to do if you really care for him.

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

She Describes a Youthful Blue and White Afternoon Frock.

A FEW days ago, I went on an afternoon's jaunt with my friend, Judith Smith.

"I'm going to get some fashion notes late this afternoon," she told me. "Don't you want to go along?"

"I'd love to," I said, immediately.

"Well, find out whether Madame can spare you," she urged. I often go out with Judith, and she knows Madame likes to have me go, because of the new ideas I get.

"Miss Smith must be very up-to-date in her work for her fashion magazine," Madame told me. "I realize that going about with her helps you to keep your mind fresh and receptive to new ideas, and when we are not busy, I'll be glad to have you go with her whenever she wants you."

So when I told Madame that Judith was going to a very smart shop to see their imports, she allowed me to go along.

"I've seen some luscious new frocks," Judith confided to me as we went along.

"What materials?" I asked, much interested.

"Sheer materials," she answered. "The chiffons and embroidered batistes this season are too lovely for words."

"Yes, I agree with you," I said. Madame has been showing some adorable printed chiffons."

"Oh, yes, they're all the rage," Judith agreed. "Of course, any printed material is, but I think there's something about sheer printed chiffon that is particularly alluring."

"I want to make a chiffon before the season comes on," I confided to her. "I have a lovely bit of printed chiffon that Madame let me buy at cost."

"Then I know just the frock I'd like to have you see," Judith replied. "I saw it when those imports came in and asked that one of the manikins have it on this morning so I could get a sketch."

"How shall I know it?" I asked.

"Look for the loveliest printed chiffon you can find," she said. "It will be white printed in blue. You can't miss it."

And immediately, I saw it. In answer to the appreciative look in my eye, Judith nodded. "Did you ever see anything so attractive?" she asked.

"Never," I answered.

"And it's so simple, you could copy it in a jiffy," she assured me.

"Yes," I agreed. "The plain white about the neck and sleeves with slits bound in the chiffon would be easy."

"The skirt is straight, with just a few gathers. It's slit all the way up one side, so that sheer band of chiffon can run up there as well as around the bottom."

"And where the dark blue velvet sash is, I'll use black velvet," I said. "Really, I can hardly wait to get home and cut mine out."

PLEADS GUILTY TO SHOOTING OF FOLEY

Russell Rector Throws Self on the Mercy of Judge—Says He Went to Right a Wrong.

OMAHA, Neb., March 17.—Russel Rector, thirty-eight, teamster, who has been held in county jail on a charge of first degree murder in connection with the fatal shooting of Charles Foley at his home, 1803 Grace street, the night of March 4, threw himself on the mercy of District Judge Goss yesterday afternoon.

He pleaded guilty to manslaughter, "I went there that night to right a wrong," he told the judge. "I wanted to effect a reconciliation with my wife if I could. We had been separated seven months. I didn't know she was going to get a divorce."

He told the judge he asked Foley for his wife, and they got into an argument. He said Foley struck at him, after which he pulled a gun and shot at Foley three times.

ASHLAND GIRL A SUICIDE

Miss Bertha Sandstrom Who Once Lived in Lincoln and University Place, Drank Lysol.

ASHLAND, Neb., March 17.—Miss Bertha Sandstrom committed suicide at the home of her brother-in-law, Roy Quick, by drinking lysol. She had been despondent for three or four months following a nervous breakdown about five months ago. Miss Sandstrom went out doors for a walk. Not returning, a search was made and she was found lying by a gate in the orchard at about midnight. Medical aid was immediately summoned and it was thought for a time that she could be saved. The exposure had weakened her.

Miss Sandstrom attended Ashland high school for two years and graduated from the high school at University Place in 1921. She took a business course in Lincoln and was a stenographer at the Mutual Insurance company's office for several months, giving up her work and coming to the home of her sister, Mrs. Roy Quick, where she has been for the past five months.

NEEDS FURTHER DESOLATION

Hitchcock Declares Not Until Europe Loses More Can She Solve Problems.

OMAHA, March 17.—"Not until Europe has become still more desolate can she be brought to her senses and her problems solved," Former Senator Hitchcock, who arrived here yesterday for a brief visit, said.

Both France and Germany, according to Hitchcock are enormous losers on account of the struggle on the Ruhr. He believes Great Britain has done all she can to bring peace and prosperity in Europe without result.

President Harding's proposal that the United States adhere to decisions of a high court of international justice established by the league of nations came too late, in Hitchcock's opinion, to have a good effect on the desperate European situation.

MANY MILES THRU BLIZZARD

Traveling Man Thought Hair Must Have Turned White.

COLUMBUS, Neb., March 16.—With his car stalled in the snowdrifts somewhere between David City and Columbus, G. B. Travis, specialty saleman, braved the storm on foot, walking to Columbus along the Burlington right of way thru the blizzard ariving at 1:30 a. m.

Travis who tips the scales at 200 pounds, said that the first thing he did when he arrived was to look in a mirror to see if his hair had turned white.

"That walk," he said, "recalled all the stories I had ever heard about men who died in the blizzards of the early day. I bruised any ankles on the ties and the rails by wandering back and forth between the tracks. Walking across the trestle over the Platte river was the worst part of the whole program."

Travers said that he had no idea how far he walked but thought it was between 12 and 15 miles. "It was impossible to see a house so the best thing that I could do, after the car stalled, was to follow the tracks."

Now, a Quick Quaker Oats

Cooks in 3 to 5 minutes

The quickest cooking oats in the world

Now your grocer has Quaker Oats in two styles. One the kind you have always known—the other is Quick Quaker.

Quick Quaker cooks in from 3 to 5 minutes. And it cooks to perfection. So it is almost like a ready-cooked dish.

No other oat flakes on the market cook anywhere near so quickly.

The two styles are identical in quality and flavor. Both are flaked from the finest grains only—just the rich, plump, flavory oats. A bushel of choice oats yields but ten pounds of these delicious flakes.

But in Quick Quaker the oats are cut before flaking. They are rolled very thin and partly cooked. So the flakes are smaller and thinner—that is all. And those small, thin flakes cook quickly.

Ask for Quick Quaker if you want this style. Your grocer has both. But always get Quaker Oats for their delightful flavor.

GAIN OF 25 POUNDS IS ACHIEVED BY SARGENT

Well Known News Man Declares Tanlac Ended Indigestion, Heartburn, Palpitations, and Other Troubles. Weight and Strength Restored.

"I never mince words in praising Tanlac, for it has actually built me up twenty-five pounds in weight and increased my working efficiency so that I am like a man made over," said Raymond R. Sargent 908 E. 25th St., Kansas City, Mo., popular news agent on the Santa Fe between Kansas City and Chicago.

"Before I got Tanlac my nerves nearly wore out and indigestion got an awful grip on me. Heartburn, gas pains and palpitation were terrible, I lost weight, and suffered from headaches, backaches and billousness too. Why, I was completely sapped of energy and felt about all in.

"But the Tanlac treatment soon got my troubles on the run, and they have disappeared completely. I feel as spry as a schoolboy now, and smiles come so easy for me that I am smashing all my old records. Many of the passengers I know frequently make complimentary remarks about my increased weight and healthy, robust appearance."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35-million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

Problems of the Aerial.

VI—The "Two-Man" Aerial.

With new aerial installations multiplying by the dozen in every neighborhood of every city almost overnight it has become a common problem now how two people who live near each other can put up aerials in the simplest way and combine their outfits.

This is particularly the case where people live in rows of houses in the city and where their back yards join each other. In this case it is usually the simplest matter for each man to put up an aerial mast on the front of his house and then divide the aerial in two over the back-yard fence and each man take a lead-in from one-half to his house.

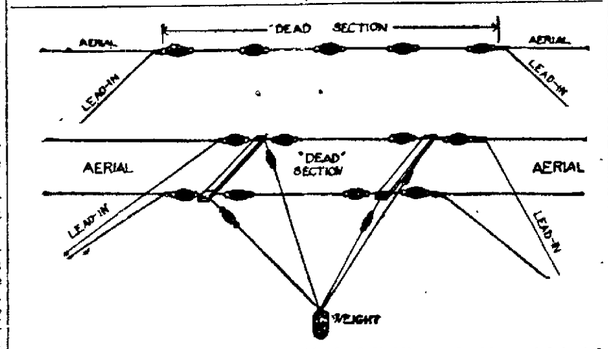

This is perfectly possible to do, and I have seen a great many aerials put up in this way, but I notice that almost all of them simply put one insulation in the middle of the installation to divide the wire and each man uses one-half of it.

This is not good practice. It is perfectly possible to use this general idea, but the single insulator in between the two aerials is not sufficient division to keep them from interfering with each other, especially if both people are using bulb sets. As I have said many times in these articles, a bulb set when tuned quite sharply re-radiates the signals which it is receiving and this re-radiation is likely to affect any nearby aerial.

While this re-radiation is usually felt only with aerials that are quite near and more or less parallel with the original aerial, it can, if there is more than one bulb in the set, be a nuisance to any nearby aerial, no matter what its direction.

Therefore, in installing two aerials on the same pair of masts in this way, it is much wiser to use a dead section in the middle, and this section should be at least ten feet long and should contain from three to five insulators, and these insulators should not be the little ones which are only an inch or two long, but should be the corrugated kind and should be at least six inches long each.

The illustration shows two types of aerials built on this idea. The pictures show only the middle part, because it is not necessary to show the masts, as these have been very thoroughly covered in past articles.

These illustrations show the best method of dividing a double aerial installation so that one aerial will not interfere with the other.

The upper illustration is perfectly simple, because it has to deal with two single wire aerials. This should be attempted only where there is a space of more than 200 feet between the masts and where each separate aerial can be at least 100 feet long.

If the space for each separate aerial is less than 100 feet, it will be very well worth while to make two wires each. The installation then becomes the one shown in the lower illustration. The dead end which divides the two should here be as near ten feet long as is possible, and there should be a weight of some kind hung on a bridle of four ropes, one from the end of each of the two spreaders. This weight should hang as low as possible. Its object is, of course, to keep the aerial from swinging around in the wind and twisting. This weight will also prevent the aerial from swaying up and down in the wind, as an installation of this length is very likely to do. This swaying up and down is a very decided detriment to good tuning, and I will deal with this phase of the subject in a future article.

STREET DEPARTMENT BUSY

Superintendent Overton Sends Out Large Forces Saturday Morning to Clean Gutters.

The city street department had a large force at work Saturday cleaning the snow away from the sewers and keeping the gutters clear of the fast-flowing water.

Superintendent Overton attempted to do some work Friday night but the weather was cold and the wind blew a gale and so little progress was made that it was abandoned.

Complaints were received at the city hall that some of the basements in the business houses had been flooded. Superintendent Overton more than doubled the labor forces Saturday. All along O street and on the side business streets, men were found looking after the accumulated water.

DENIES RIGHT TO INTERFERE

STATE BANK ASKS DISMISSAL OF ATTORNEY GENERAL SUIT.

Claims That Citizens State of Holdrege Is Not Insolvent and That It Won't Be When Funds Collected.

The State bank of Omaha, enjoined a few days ago by the supreme court at the request of the attorney general, filed answer Saturday alleging that the state had no right to interfere wih the bank's sale of collateral held by it as security for a note of $75,000 owingby the Citizens State bank of Holdrege, which recently was taken over by the department of trade and commerce.

The bank denies that the Citizens is insolvent or that it will have to be liquidated thru a receivership. It says that no receiver has been appointed, and that if the guaranty fund pays the sum ordered by the court to be paid to the Citizens State, representing a claim of $187,000 because of the fact that the Holdrege State bank, which it took over, lacked that amount of paying depositors' claims, the bank will be able toagain open for business.

It is averred that the department of trade and commerce was notified by the State bank of Omaha of its intention to sell the collateral at public auction, that the fact was given wide publicity and that the department made no objection. The defendant says it had a right to assume that this manner of realizing on its loan to the Citizens was satisfactory; that a number of bankers were present to bid and that par would have been realized on most of the notes. It was the intention of the bank to offer first the best collateral, and to return the remainder to the Citizens bank after it had sold $70,000 or $75,000 worth.

Objection is made that the action of the state of Nebraska in interfering was a gross injustice to the bank, and that it will result in a lessened total for the collateral when finally sold. It is insisted that the date set for the sale was the most opportune time for disposing of the notes, and a depreciation in value has followed. Many of the notes are due, and makers desire to renew, and the situation generally was most favorable then for a sale. Dismissal of the suit is asked.

I know of," said Yates. "I am told his firm would back him financially to the extent of $50,000 if he needed it."

A. B. Lee was manager of the General Tire company's supply house on North Twelfth street and was well known among auto accessory dealers in a business way altho many confessed Saturday morning that they knew little about him outside of business matters.

Mr. Lee came to Lincoln about six months ago from North Platte, where he had been in the tire business. He seemed to have much experience in tire selling and was regarded as a good salesman.

Friends here were somewhat surprised to learn from Omaha papers that he was in the habit of carrying a gun. They had never suspected that and some were inclined to discredit that statement. He ate his meals frequently at the Elks club. He did his banking at the National Bank of Commerce.

So far as known here he had neither financial nor other troubles. A lady friend in Omaha was quite an attraction, that being his excuse for weekend visits to that city. He drove a Nash roadster that was found in Omaha and has been turned over to the police.

Lee is said to have a mother, Mrs. Mary Lee, in New York City, and a brother, George, in Bartlesville, Okla.

Mr. Lee went to Omaha last Saturday and did not return, according to Frank Porter, who is also connected with the General Tire and Rubber company office here. It has been his custom to make week end trips there where he has been in business and has many friends there, said Mr. Porter. Mr. Lee is manager of the office here of which Lancaster county is the territory.

Mr. Lee has a brother who is thought to be in Omaha. No relatives reside in Lincoln. Mr. Porter tried to call him by telephone Friday but was unable to get in touch with him at the Paxton hotel where he usually stops. He was conservative and quiet and a good hard-headed business man in the opinion of Mr. Porter, and did not appear to be the sort of man who would take his own life.

to Deputy Schmitt, that the "dope" on Edwards had been discovered anyhow, and hat no intention had been formed to send Mrs. Edwards to any institution.

Mrs. Edwards is in Lincoln. She has relatives in Beatrice. After his escape from the penitentiary, Edwards located his wife's sister, and later found his wife at Ottumwa, Ia. He had been in Lincoln about two weeks when arrested, and had been working at the Royal lunch, which was damaged by the O street fire.

Edwards claimed he didn't steal a suit case from Margery O'Donnell. "I was living with my wife at 1135 Q street," he said. "and two women came to my house to leave their suit cases there. They said they had been burned out by the fire. I shoved the suit cases under my bed and the officers found them there."

Edwards said if he is sent back to Richmond he will have to serve out his remaining ninety days plus a year for escaping. Officials are in doubt about how much of Edwards' story to take seriously. They are waiting for details from Richmond. Deputy County Attorney Max Towle said he didn't know whether to prosecute the larceny charge, or send Edwards back to Virginia. He said he would see what the authorities there have to say.

Edwards says that he was born and raised in Kentucky and that his parents were mountaineers. He also claims that his mother is a sister to the Hatfield boys who comprised the famous outlaw gang that was active in feud fighting.

He was arrested by Captain of Detectives Walter Anderson late Wednesday. According to a telegram received by Chief of Police Johnstone Saturday, Edwards served time in the stat ereformatory of Kentucky.

HE COMMENTS UPON FINANCIAL REPORT

Governor Bryan Finds Fault With Manner of Its Adoption and Does Not Alter His Former Figures.

Governor Bryan commented briefly Saturday upon the financial report of the legislative joint committee, a report that declares a previous financial statement of the governor's contains many errors. The governor said he had filed his report at the request of the house of representatives and had placed it in the form of farmers' bookkeeping so any one could understand it. His figures were taken from official records and statements of heads of departments. His statement predicted a deficit of $4,000,000 in state finances at the close of this year.

"I was disappointed," said Governor Bryan "in that the joint committee report is not in comparative form. A nasty examination of the report does not reveal to me any figures contradictory in any essential part the figures the house asked for and received from me. The maze of figures and exhaustive review of the joint committee covers a different period than the one covered by the report I filed. I believe mine represents the financial condition of the state's business affairs at the time mentioned in my report.

An interesting political feature of the affair is that the joint committee required the members of the house and senate to vote upon its adoption without an opportunity to familiarize themselves with it and declined to hold adoption in abeyance until the democratic minority of the joint committee had time to analyze it, or until the constituents of the house could have time to consult and advice with their representatives as to whether it was proper to adopt it.

"The committee points out balances in funds that no one seems to know anything about."

"As the joint committee had at hand all official records and the records are in charge of officers and officials of the same political party, the committee was very deliberate in collecting and formulating its report during a period of thirty days.

"It is my intention to analyze the report as rapidly as possible and will make such statement as I deem necessary in comparing it with the report filed by me. I have no definite figures to justify any change in my report."

NO PROMISCUOUS DEBATE

Governor Bryan Is Willing Merely to Talk Over His Own Bills and Leave It to the People.

Governor Bryan admits he has received a letter from Representative Strehlow in regard to a joint debate upon the code laws before the legislature. He finds it is not responsive to the offer of the governor in regard to proposed debates with legislators. However, he said he would answer it respectfully. The governor has not had official notice that Senator Reed proposes a debate at York any time the governor cares to name a date.

The governor desires it understood he did not issue a general challenge to legislators to debate bills introduced. He merely offered, if a legislator feels that the governor's bill are not in accord with the wishes of his constituents he would go to the county seat and present the matter with the representative and leave it to the people.

SNAVELY OR FLANSBURG?

Indicated That Former City Attorney Will Run for Mayor If Other Man Declines.

"If E. F. Snavely refuses to run for mayor C. C. Flansburg will make the race" Ed. Schroder, publicity man for the Bryan forces announced Saturday. "Mr. Flansburg will not run if Mr. Snavely will serve."

C. C. Flansburg was city attorney for several years. He has held no other office in Lincoln. Mr. Schroder is hopeful that Mr. Snavely will see his way clear to enable him to become a candidate. He has the endorsement of Governor Bryan.

Petitions are now being circulated for C. L. Rein for city commissioner. Mr. Rein was a candidate two years ago but was short on votes. Petitions on behalf of Judge H. J. Whitmore as a candidate for mayor were submitted to the city clerk Saturdday morning, but they weer withdrawn for the purpose of meeting certain legal requirements.

DELAYS GOODHUE'S ANSWER

Illness in Family of His Office Manager Retards Reply to Johnson's Additional Charges.

Governor Bryan has received a message from Bertram G. Goodhue, architect for the capitol commission. The message states that the architect's answer to a written statement filed with the commission by Mr. Johnson, March 8, will be delayed on account of the illness of Mrs. Mayers, wife of Mr. Goodhue's office manager. Mr. Goodhue adds that he has sent a formal notice of this character to the secretary of the commission. The commission will make public Mr Johnson's additional charges and Mr Goodhue's answer when the latter is received.

A CHOICE BIT OF STRATEGY

DEMOCRATS ADMIT MATHERS PUT SOMETHING OVER.

Minority Members Relieved of What May Have Embarrassed Them When Elsasser Pulled in His Smile.

Even house democrats concede that Speaker Mathers pulled a snug piece of strategy Friday when, after gathering in a few democratic confessions of party faith, he showed them that either they are unfamiliar with their own party platform or do not believe in it if they oppose his amendment to the Dysart bills placing governmental activities under executive state officers.

Neither republicans nor democrats hold that strategy alone can break present party lines. Representative Hyde, minority member who is said to be close to the governor, admitted Saturday that the speaker "put it over big." He added, however, that the democrats will stand pat until a test vote is taken and one side or the other is whipped.

"An eventful day," said Representative Wilson of Dawes, in speaking of the Friday skirmish. Mr. Wilson is a republican.

Representative Elsasser, democrat, pulled himself out of what appeared to be something of a hole or was pulled out by Osterman and other democrats. This member proposed Friday to demand proof of Representative Lamb who charged that Governor Bryan had made false statements thru the press. Mr. Elsasser went so far as to propose that if the charge be substantiated, steps be taken to impeach the governor.

Republicans are now wondering what may have resulted had the house not given unanimous consent to withdrawal of the Elsasser motion. The member from Douglas lost no time in pulling it out of the fire and shortly thereafter, the joint committee of which Representative Lamb is a member, filed an exhaustive financial report showing that instead of there being a deficit, as claimed by the governor in the state treasury at the close of the fiscal year, there will be a snug balance.

HOUSES SOLD FOR A SONG

How would you like to buy a whole house for $48. This was the price that the city got for a three room residence located on Monroe avenue. Five houses in a more or less state of delapidation were sold at auction by City Clerk Theo H. Berg. They brought $395.

The auction place was the first floor lobby at the city hall and the city clerk after following the most approved methods of modern auctioneers disposed of the property to the highest bidder. A number of men and one woman attended the sale. The houses while small, old and weather-stricken are susceptible of being repaired and making fit habitations for small families that have the home hunger.

The park department has been making rapid-fire purchases of Monroe avenue houses as fast as owners show their heads and want to talk business at moderate rate. Some day the department expects to gobble up every house on the avenue and add the space to give the space to the people as part of a big playground. Monroe avenue is a short and rather noted highway which begins at Twenty-first street and ends at Twenty-third street. It is between N and M streets.

FIFTEEN DEAD IN TORNADO

Dozen Seriously Injured in Wind Storm at Savage, Miss., It Is Reported.

SAVAGE, Miss., March 17.—Fifteen persons were reported dead and scores are homeless following a tornado which tore across northern Mississippi Thursday night.

Mrs. D. C. Patterson Dead.

OMAHA, Neb., March 17.—Mrs. D. C. Patterson, 311 North Thirty-eighth avenue, died Friday in Cleveland, O., where she had been visiting her sister while Mr. Patterson is on a trip around the world. She suffered a collapse three weeks ago.

No funeral plans are known, according to the Rev. A. F. Ernst, pastor of Lowe Avenue Presbyterian church, a brother-in-law.

Mrs. Patterson is survived by a son, David C. Patterson, jr., lieutenant commander in the navy, and two daughters, Miss Eugenie and Mrs. Miriam Fairbank, of Chicago.

Mr. Patterson's present whereabouts is not known to Omaha relatives. He is believed to be now in India.

FLOCK TO NIGHT CAFES.

BERLIN, (By mail)—At least 5,000 "runners and cappers" circulate each night among Berlin's sensation-hunting crowds, enticing their victims into secret illegal joints.

The industry of the secret "lokale"—seats of Berlin's so-called "wicked" night life—draws at least 200,000 persons nightly to eat of the "forbidden fruit" of high priced champagne, profiteer cover charges and rather disappointing nude and near-nude dancers.

BERLIN (By mail)—Berlin is celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of the first cabaret here. A quarter of a century ago the cabaret idea was entirely new and failure was predicted as the pioneer launched his first ratting-entertainment enterprise. Today Berlin boasts of more than 100 of the finest cabarets in the world

SWIFT JUSTICE IS GIVEN EMBEZZLER

E. H. Reimers of Cedar Rapids, Ia., Arrested, Confessed Guilt, Tried and Given Term Within Twenty-four Hours.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., March 17.—Swift justice was meted out to E. H. Reimers, former manager and secretary of the Keve Lumber company, who was arrested here late yesterday charged with embezzlement from his employers of $100,000.

Reimers confessed his guilt, was arraigned before Justice Lightner, waived to the grand jury and was held in jail in default of $10,000 bond. He appeared at 10 a. m. today before Judge F. L. Anderson in district court pleaded guilty to the charge of larceny by embezzlement and was sentenced to the penitentiary at Fort Madison for five years all within the short space of twenty-four hours.

Reimers wife left the city early this week for her home in Morrison, Ia., when it was evident that her husband's shortage had been discovered.

Reimers will be taken to Fort Madison Monday to start his sentence. He had nothing to say in court aside from admitting having gambled the money on the board of trade, saying that "it was a case of putting too much trust in another man."

GIRL'S HEAD ON PENNY

Kansas Student Declares His Ancestress Was "Indian Head" on One Cent Piece.

McPHERSON, Kas., March 17.—That the engraving on the pennies used for scores of years before the Lincoln penny, is not the portrait of an Indian, as commonly believed, but that of a twelve-year-old girl, was claimed in a statement by Samuel Maust, a student at McPherson college here.

Maust traces his ancestry back to continental days, and the story of the engraving of the dies which the first "Indian head" penny were made, is one of the traditions of his family, he said.

According to information given by Maust the engraving on the coin was the work of James Barton Longacer, who was chief engraver at the Philadelphia mint from 1828 to 1840. In the year 1835 a contest was opened for sketches and engravings for the national 1-cent piece. Longacer sketched the face of his twelve-year-old daughter Sarah, it was accepted and the engraving was placed on the 1-cent piece then used, which was about the size of the present-day 25-cent coin.

Shortly after this, a number of Indians with their chief came to visit the government heads regarding land grants, and while at Philadelphia were taken to the mint, where they were introduced to the "white chief picture-maker," Longacer. Sarah was visiting her father at the mint and she and the Indian chief became very friendly. The chief courteously and solemnly divested himself of his feathers, and had the headdress placed on the little maiden's head. The effect was so striking in the artist mind of the father that he took time to make a sketch of the picture, finishing it later for his own pleasure.

Not being satisfied with his previous design, Longacer conceived the idea that Indian features and Saxon sweetness would make a striking effect. He took the matter up with the officials of the mint, and with their permission the new engravings were made, the dies cut, and the penny was restruck with the "Indian head" likeness. Maust claims direct ancestry from the Longacers.

FOUR STRONG TEAMS AFTER DAVIS TROPHY

Spain, France, Australia and Japan Considered Strongest Contenders for Honors Now Held by United States Team.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Spain, France, Australia and Japan are expected to give the United States the biggest argument this year for the classic Davis tennis cup. All four are potentially strong, and no matter which team survives up to the challenge round the American team will have a formidable opponent.

The draw of the seventeen challenging nations could not have been better if it had been arranged. France and Spain are found in opposite halves in the European zone, and Japan and Australia no doubt will get together in the second round of the American zone entries.

New System Is Better.

The new zoning system, which permits all the European nations to go thru the preliminary rounds without the expense of sending a team on a long journey, was adopted to make it easier for the nations with small pocketbooks; and it probably will result in fewer defaults than have ever been recorded.

Australia, according to cable reports, plans to send a team of youngsters to get them ready for the future They say Gerald Patterson, Pat O'Hara Wood and Jim Anderson are not available this year. But is must be remembered that the Australians are always good for a couple of winter bear stories.

Japan will be a strong entry and so will the young French team, which will be finding itself some of these days. Spain looks to be very dangerous as Manuel Alonzo is a finished player and an experienced internationalist.

English Not Strong.

The English team has not been improved, and it is not being considered seriously. Italy and Belgium are also only fair, and the other smaller nations are just getting a start at international tennis.

The action of the international tennis federation in abolishing the title of "world's championship" takes the world's championship tournament away from Wimbledon, England, and settles in favor of the United States an argument of six years' standing which has kept the United States association out of the federation.

"The politics of tennis are all over now. The United States association has no reason for not entering the federation and tennis has nothing but world wide advancement ahead of it." J. S. Myrick, former president of the association, said today.

Wells Gets Decision Over Schoell In Best Fight Ever put on in Omaha

Set Killing Pace Early With English Welter Champ Holding Advantage in All But Three Rounds —Herman Knocks Out Engberg.

By John E. Casey.

Billy Wells, welterweight champion of England was awarded the decision over Frankie Schoell, Buffalo, by Referee Curly Ulrich after ten sensational rounds of milling, at Omaha, Friday night Wells forced the fighting from the start and had Schoell groggy in most of the rounds. Well's clever headwork had Schoell unable to land his celebrated left. There was not a moment's stalling, both boxers trying for a knockout from the first gong.

Wells constantly forced Schoell to the ropes trying desperately to whip over the finishing punch. Two straight lefts to Schoell's nose in the second stanza started the claret. They mixed steadily setting so fast a pace that it seemed impossible for it to go the full route. Wells had the advantage on every exchange and piled up a big lead early in the battle.

Schoell bled from the nose and mouth in every round. Wells landed regularly with a left hook and a right cross staggering the Buffalo boxer in every frame except the first, second and eighth. Schoell absorbed lots of punishment but gamely came back for more.

Both Clean Boxers.

They exchanged rights and lefts to the head and fought each other all over the ring. Schoell landed a right hook and cut a deep gash over Well's eye in the sixth. Both were bleeding freely as the bell ended this round. Wells was earning a shade on the infighting and exchanges. Wells knocked Schoell through the ropes in the third but caught him and pulled him back in the ring. Two cleaner boxers never appeared in an Omaha ring. And a better fight was never staged there.

A right hook had Schoell all but out in the fourth frame. Schoell bounced off the ropes in the seventh canto and landed a straight right flush on the Englishman's jaw. Wells smiled and again drove Schoell to the ropes.

Schoell was groggy from a bombardment of lefts and rights to the head in the ninth, the bell apparently saving him. The final frame brought the crowd to its feet. Wells staggered Schoell time and again and it seemed impossible for him to stay to the bell. Wells was landing at will when the gong sounded, but did not have strength enough left to whip over the knockout punch.

Wells won every round except the first, second and eighth which were even. Schoell weighed 145 3-4 pounds and Wells 145 1-2 pounds.

Herman Knocks Out Engberg.

"Tiny" Herman, Omaha, knocked out Emil Engberg, Minneapolis after one minute 57 seconds of fighting in the ninth canto. Herman landed a straight left steadily to Engberg's nose and the Minneapolis boxer was a gory sight after the third frame. Herman had a weight advantage of twenty-three pounds and this told on Engberg after the fifth.

Engberg was unable to block the left jab and Herman landed it with clock-like regularity.

Bowling

MILWAUKEE, Wis, March 17.—New leaders in the American bowling congress tournament stepped to the front here last night as the second squad of out-of-town bowlers took the drives.

With games of 990, 962 and 937, the Weisner-Petersons of Chicago went went into the lead in the team events, dropping 2,889 pins. The Portage Parks of Chicago came in second with 2,867, and the O'Henry's, another Chicago team, scored 2,815, placing them in third place.

COUNTRY CLUB LINKS IS READY OFR PLAY

Norman Sommers Returns From Florida and Starts Moving Into New Quarters—Snow Is Only Holdback Now.

The eighteen hole course at the new country club will be ready for play as soon as the snow melts, Norman Sommers, club professional, announced Saturday morning. Sommers returned this week from Florida, where he spends his winters. With his arrival and his announcement that the new locker room is ready for occupancy, Lincoln golfers who have been forced to put aside the mashie the past few days and confine their golfing to discussion of the merits of the steel shafted club, began polishing up the irons again.

"We should have the greatest season of golf in Lincoln's history. We are planning more tournaments than were held last year," Mr. Sommers said. "These tournaments will start as soon as the greens are opened in the spring."

While in the southland, Sommers entered several pro tournaments. At Hollywood, Fla., in a field of forty-five he finished twelfth. Mike Brady, Tommy Armour, Chick and Lee Nelson werein this play which gives some idea of the class. Jock Hutchinson was there, too.

Just before returning home Sommers followed a foursome in which Gene Sarazen and Hutchison were playing Jim Barnes nand Farrell. They played two low ball 36-hole matches. Barnes and Farrell won the first, 1 up and the second, 6 and 7.

"Sarazen had an 88 on the last eighteen And that's the kind of golf he shot all over Florida. He's young, tho, and probably just off his game," Sommers said

CHAMPIONS RESTING ON RESPECTIVE OARS

Dempsey, Wilson, Leonard, Kilbane and Lynch Are Keeping Their Crowned Heads From Becoming Uneasy.

By Henry L. Farrell.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Since July 2, 1921, when he flattened the stunning Carpentier, Jack Dempsey hasn't done a thing in the ring.

Johnny Wilson hasn't defended the middleweight championship since July 4, 1922, and then against a "ham."

Benny Leonard has been idle since last August.

Johnny, Kilbane hasn't had the featherweight crown on exhibition since 1921.

Joe Lynch is fighting second-raters in no-decision bouts and giving real contenders the expert side-step.

All of which may be taken to show and to mean that when the boys do get hold of a title they hold it.

Wants Too Much Money.

Dempsey can't fight because he wants too much money and the politicians are afraid of the reformers.

Wilson has the excuse that he is under suspension of the New York commission.

Leonard is an actor.

Kilbane and Lynch have no excuses.

The middleweight champion, however, has been matched to meet Billy Shade in Boston in the near future and he may be reinstated by the New York commission in the meantime.

Leonard is sure to fight twice this summer, and Kilbane is training for a bout with Eugene Criqui, the European champion.

No one knows what Joe Lynch will do.

Walker Won't Fight.

Mickey Walker is in the same class with Lynch. Since he won the welterweight championship he hasn't done a thing. Efforts to get him in the ring with young Dave Shade have been fruitless. Buffalo promoters offered him an unbelievable purse with the privilege of picking his own opponent and bringing him along and he wouldn't do it.

Safety first is everything with those boys.

Dave Shade is going to be the world's welterweight champion some day if there is anything sure in the ring game. He's going to be a heavyweight in the dough line, also.

Shade was twenty-one just a few days ago and in a short career in the ring he has stowed away $75,000.

He owns an apartment house on the upper west side in New York and he has other investments in real estate.

If he continues to be as fortunate as he has been in the past, he will be financially fixed to retire for the rest of his days when he gets to the advanced age of twenty-five.

Shade fights from forty to fifty times a year and he is one of the best priced cards in the game.

Kansas Should Get Chance.

Considering the great record he has made in the ring, there is no reason why Rocky Kansas should not have another chance at the lightweight title.

Kansas has beaten every contender in the class and he was only technically stopped by Leonard in their last encounter by a broken arm which forced him to quit.

Any lightweight who has beaten Jackson, Mitchell, White, Tendler and Friedman is a real fighter, and Kansas has done these things.

CRIQUI SAILS FOR NEW YORK

Johnny Kilbane to Meet French Idol for World's Title.

Well Established Stove Line Open

The sale of a well established stove line is open for Nebraska on a commission basis.

This line has been sold in Nebraska for twenty years and today ranks among the most widely and favorably known stove lines sold in that state. The 1923 line and prices represent the biggest effort this manufacturer has ever made for attracting business.

Please understanding this is not an ordinary side line but a proposition with prestige and real earning possibilities behind it. The line is well adapted to the territory—shows the very latest styles, features and finishes in stoves and as stated previously enjoys an established business.

Somewhere in the state there's a man looking for just such a proposition. He may be a man selling other lines on a commission basis to which this manufacturer would not object provided he could do this line justice. He may be salesman desiring to increase his earning possibilities by launching out on his own account with the sale of several first-class lines that are good producers such as this one.

If you are interested don't hesitate to write. All correspondence will be treated strictly confidential.

LATEST MARKETS

CHICAGO, March 17.—Grain prices were higher at the opening on the Chicago board of trade here today.

A fair class of buying developed in wheat after the opening. Liverpool prices closed higher on the strength of increased demand by the United Kingdom and other continentals for distressed grains.

Corn export buying showed improvement. A slight increase in receipts was noted.

Oats was higher on an unfeatured market. Receipts were 45 cars.

CHICAGO, March 17.—Heavy buying by commission houses, coupled with an increasing export demand, resulted in grain prices closing fractionally higher on the Chicago board of trade today.

During the short session considerable wheat was worked for export. Sellers were extremely cautious, following a report by leading cash interests that stocks in Chicago elevators and afloat were smaller than expected, being estimated at 2,144,000 bushels. The cold wave predicted for over Sunday also caused some fear for the crop.

Corn followed the advance of wheat, but considerable profit-taking was noticeable. Estimates placing the amount of corn on Illinois farms at approximately 14,000,000 bushels less than at this time last year, added some strength. The cash demand continued fair.

Oats was strong with some export buying and reports of only a small amount of reserve stocks on farms.

Provisions were bought by packers and showed strength at the close.

Grain Market Opinions.

Hulburd Warren & Chandler: Unless an extraordinary increase in foreign buying occurs, there is little likelihood that present prices will be maintained.

E Lewis & Co.: The speculative interest remains exceptionally large.

Stein Alstrin: We look for better news and higher prices.

Harris Winthrop & Co: The closed showed a strong tone.

Bartlett-Frazier & Co.: We look for fur, further large export buying in wheat and expect further good price gains in corn.

Clement Curtis & Co: The markets are in such stronger position.

Thomson McKinnon: Recent foreign buying will probably produce a little further upturn.

Logan & Bryan: We believe the advance will extend further.

J E Bennett & Co.: The markets remain responsible to buying power.

J M. Simpson: It is estimated that foreigners have been influenced by the propaganda disseminated from this country and as a consequence their supplies of wheat are very light. The markets had held very well in the face of apparently very bearish statistics and with a resumption of export demand it is only reasonable to expect a further advance in prices.—Lamson.

Chicago Tribune Report.

CHICAGO, March 17.—It looks as if farmers who have held off buying wheat and corn for a long time were cleaning up the consigned and distressed offerings. More encouragement from abroad would start increased buying here. Houses that have been good buyers on the breaks of late sold freely on the bulge without stopping the advance.

A. L. Martin of Bartlett Frazier and Company feels more bullish on grains than ever, especially since some weakened bulls have sold out just as the real turn seems about to come. Export sales reported yesterday wheat 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 bushels, practically all Manitobas 350,000 to 300,000 corn with some oats and barley.—Lamson.

Journal of Commerce Report.

CHICAGO, March 17.—Sentiment in the grain trade is much more hopeful. Further advances are expected and it is believed any sustained firmness will attract speculative interest.

Allen Logan of Kansas City estimates Kansas will raise 126,000,000 bushels of wheat this year. The crop last year was 122,000,000.

The car situation in Illinois and Iowa is reported as better but the trade does not look for any material increase in the movement as grain remaining to be marketed is in strong hands.—Lamson.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Steel plants busier than last three years. United States Steel corporation adds independents active labor shortage expected soon.—Lamson.

Broomhall Cables.

LIVERPOOL, March 17.—Broad buisness passing in wheat with marked revival in the demand for all grades. U-K fairly good buyer both Manitobas and Argentine wheats while the continent has absorbed liberal quantities of Argentine wheats and some Australian varieties. Undertone appears much firmer. Both Argentine and American shippers putting forward substantial quantities but their ideas are now higher. Buyers also taking hold of corn in a more liberal way. Good demand for American sorts.—Lamson.

Steel Plants Busy.

NEW YORK, March 17.—McManus says: Favor Kelly-Springfield; Rubber: Studebaker Chandler and Equipments, buy them on every weakness.

NEW YORK. We look for a strong market before today's close and much stronger Monday. A demand appeared for all stocks that were offered for sale on the reaction yesterday.

Bonds—Buy B & O and St. Paul bonds particularly those that were formerly legal for savings banks in New York state. Many of those bonds are yielding more than 6 per cent and Governor Smith signed a bill amending the banink law so as to extend for a further two years from the period following government operation of the railroads during the qualification of the railroad bonds as savings banks investments need not apply. Wall Street Journal Review.

NEW YORK, March 17.—From the standpoint of volume of dealings, today's stock market session was the least important of any two-hour day since the start of the successive phase of the market. There was a complete absence of liquidation at current levels.

Professional operators succeeded in forcing some recessions among the speculative leaders in the early dealings, but offerings dried up on the reaction.

The market closed higher.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Encouraged by optimistic weekly trade reports, the stock market showed a full steady tone at the opening today. Many stocks opened at yesterday's level and others were high by good fractions.

Pan-American Petroleum stocks, which went down yesterday on the Bedford statement, turned upward slightly on the reply of Chairman Doheny of Mexican Petroleum that Mexico would produce oil for some years to come.

CHICAGO BUTTER REVIEW

Market Report Firmer and the Receipts Lighter.

CHICAGO, March 17.—Butter Market Firmer. Receipts Lighter. Receipts played an important part in determining the course and condition of the butter market during the week ending March 17. This is indicated by the fact that the market gained in strength as the week progressed, registering steady advances while nearly all factors except that of supplies were of a bearish nature and the rest did not change in their influence on the market. So far as the total amount of butter in storage is concerned was concerned, there was probably little change from the week before but from the standpoint of activity such as speculative demand and anticipating future needs, there was distinct indication an advance in prices. An almost total lack of confidence in the situation beyond the immediate future was a feature of the week's market. Receivers very generally were free sellers because they believed letting butter accumulate promised small rewards at the risk of heavier losses. Buyers were very conservative in their purchases, preferring to run short rather than carry over supplies. Except in the early part of the week, speculative demand which almost entirely absent.

Lack of Confidence Fails to Weaken Market: In spite of all this, however, there were steady advances and at the close of the week the markets were much firmer than when the week opened. Trading stocks on all the markets had shown material reductions This was due to the fact that receipts increased to a point below the current requirements of the trade which in time necessitated drawing on previous accumulations and the storage stocks. All markets felt this gradual decrease in supplies and altho at first reluctant to advance later as some of the receivers were forced to buy on the open market and buyers experienced difficulty supplying their needs, the pressure of demand became too great for the existing level of prices.

New Zealand Butter Causes Nervousness: The principal reasons for the uncertainty which trade viewed the situation were the large cargo of New Zealand butter which was unloaded at New York during the previous week, and the fact that the producing season is rapidly approaching. While it was doubted that the entire cargo would move into domestic channels, there was no definite information that this was not the case. For several days, while the butter laid on dock, there were rumors that negotiations for the sale of it were going on with English and Canadian buyers but it was not until late in the week that it was pretty definitely established that a part of the cargo was sold to Canada. Some was also moved into storage but nothing definite was learned about sales to English buyers. The deal shrouded with a great deal of mystery, the fact that available trading supplies on the markets were much lighter and the market firmer served to minimize the influence of the disposition of the New Zealand butter.

Domestic Production Uncertain: However, the possibility that domestic receipts might increase sharply still hung over the markets. It was possible that the decrease in receipts was due to delays incident to bad weather in the producing sections and equally possible at this time of the year that milder weather would come and with it a sharp increase in production. The latest available reports on production, however, seemed to discount this as all indicated a lighter make with stocks all over the country closely cleaned up. Reports from receivers also failed to indicate great delays in shipments. Nevertheless, operators watched the situation closely and were not willing to commit themselves too heavily.

Supply Undergrades Light. First California Butter Appears at New York: The same condition of shortage and undergrades compared with top scores and a corresponding narrow range between scores noted the previous week, existed. Even the arrival of 2,000 boxes of Argentine at New York on the 12th apparently failed to relieve the portage of undergrades on that market. This importation did not have any noticeable effect on the market. Neither did the arrival of several cars of California butter at New York and the purchase of a few cars by Chicago merchants have any material effect.

Ambassador Herrick cabled the state department that the French foreign office had sent one of its officials into the occupied German territory to investigate the difficulties between foreign commercial interests and the French and German authorities in obtaining deliveries on shipments.

FATAL BLAZE INCENDIARY

PLOT SEEN IN DEATH OF WASHINGTON WIDOW'S FAMILY.

Mother, Two Little Children and Brother-in-Law Killed in Bakery Fire—Two Beaten With Axe.

EVERETT, Wash., March 17.—The murder of four persons—a widow, her two little children and her brother-in-law was revealed today when fire, apparently of incendiary origin, destroyed a bakery here.

The dead:

MRS CLEOPATRA KARAS, PROPRIETRESS.
ALEXANDER KARAS, FOUR.
FOLLY KARAS, TWO.
GUS KARAS, BROTHER OF MRS KARAS' DEAD HUSBAND.

Mrs. Karas and her brother-in-law were evidently beaten to death with an axe by a fiend who then saturated the building with oil and set it on fire.

COWGILL FOR COMMISSIONER

RETIRED ARMY OFFICER WANTS WATER DEPARTMENT.

Three Candidates Would Like to Hold Down Position Now Occupied by William Schroeder.

Allen P. Cowgill, a retired major of the United States army is a candidate for city commissioner, with a preference for the water and light department. Petitions are now being circulated for him. Ed Schroder said that in Major Cowgill the progressives have a candidate qualified fo rhead of the city water and light department. Major Cowgill said that be has specialized in civil, mechanical and electrical engineering and that his army work has been along civilian lines. He recalled that while attending the Lincoln high school he carried a State Journal route. If nominated and elected city commissioner he stated that he will be ready to give the city of Lincoln practical engineering and executive service, for which he claims, he is especially fitted. Major Cowgill submitted this brief biography:

Major Allen P. Cowgill, U. S. army, retired, graduated at Lincoln high school in 1907 and attended the University of Nebraska, taking the mechanical engineering course. He was appointed by Senator Burkett to West Point in 1909, graduating with high honors in the class of 1914. Commissioned in the corps of engineers, the highest branch of the army, he served as an engineer officer until his retirement. He is also a graduate of the engineer school, U. S. army, Washington, D. C. His last active duty was at Manila, P. I., where he had charge of the department engineers office, Philippine department. He was retired for disability incident to the service in 1921 and returned to Lincoln. He built himself a home at 2210 Smith street where he and his family now reside.

Major Cowgill's father was the late Dr. Warwick M. Cowgill of Lincoln.

The throwing of the hat of Major Cowgill in the race with a preference for water and light commissioner marks the entrance of four candidates. C. E Kittinger, 527 North Seventeenth street, filed for city commissioner Saturday morning. He has been trying for some time to induce the city council to give him a contract to find water.

Petitions are now being circulated for Joseph Burns as a candidate for city commissioner. Mr. Burns has written letters to the papers urging that more water be found. It is understood that Messrs. Burns and Kittinger would like the water and light department if they win. Commissioner Schroeder will file early next week.

SCOUTS ARE ENTERTAINED

Eighteen scouts who have won honors of various sorts this winter were guests of scoutmasters and councillors Saturday at luncheon at the chamber of commerce. A. S. Dougall presided, and introduced Scout Glen Schwender, who took first honors with nine recruits to his credit, and Scout Byron James, who exhibited thirty-one merit badges. These lads spoke respectively on what scouting meant to them and what they expected to get out of it in the future. E. L. Smith spoke on scout ideals and Dr. B. F. Bailey gave a word of appreciation of the boys and what they were doing. Scout Executive Kent reported on the membership rally, saying it had netted 227 new scouts in six weeks and they were still coming in. Roy Wall led the crowd in scout songs between speeches.

MEN AND THINGS

In consonance with our theory that no man's opinion is worth very much about a matter that he doesn't know very much about, we hesitate to ask the chair for recognition But there is apparently much in the suggestion of Regent Bates that the normal college expenses could be materially decreased if the last two years of the teacher training courses were given at the state university, where exactly the same kind of training is being given—enough at any rate to justify a serious and intelligent debate In the Michigan legislature the suggestion has been made that in order to keep the expanding cost of the state university within bounds students attending it should get their first two years of college training elsewhere

The bureau of statistics of the federal department of labor prints a little booklet each month which tells the truth about prices. It is worth reading. During the month of December the average cost of food in this country was 41 per cent more than it was in December, 1913. The increase ranged from 17 per cent for potatoes to 92 per cent for lamb. The table included about everything that enters into the ordinary table expenses. The figures are not so explicit nor do they cover so wide a range of investigation for clothing, housing, fuel and light and furniture, but in Chicago clothing has increased 70 per cent since 1915, rent, 88 9 per cent, fuel and light, 65 6 per cent, and furniture and furnishings, 120.4, or an average of 68 per cent.

Given equal knowledge of the facts, men differ widely in their application to conditions This was well illustrated the other day when a majority of the house members voted to kill a bill which would have created a commission of farmers, educators and business men to study the school system and report to the next legislature what changes can be made without loss of efficiency and yet with lessened cost of administration The best argument against commissions is that legislatures seldon pay any attention to their recommendations, but the one that killed the bill was tha it would cost money to find out how to save money on our schools. What do you thunk of that?

The politicians seem agreed that the most formidable candidate for the democratic nomination for president is Mr. McAdoo, and that his chief strength lies in the fact that the railroad workers will all be for him because he was the man most responsible for the satisfactory wages they now get. There are also those who think that McAdoo ran the railroads, as director general, better than did the private owners It would seem that we don't learn much. We intend to continue picking our presidents, the men who run the biggest business institution known, from among those who achieve their best records as politicians, instead of going out and finding some man with a record of business achievement.

In a current series of interviews with Henry Ford that gentleman says that with a proper readjustment of things men need not work any more than twenty-five minutes a day to secure sufficient upon which to live and prosper. But who wants to work only twenty-five minutes a day? And who, working but twenty-five minutes a day, for a period of time, would be worth twenty-five cents a day if we measure what he does by what he ought to get for it? Years ago somebody sought to blow into flame the hope of many by writing a song, 'Every day will be Sunday bye and bye." Consider what the average Sunday is to you, would you think that a promise that every day would be like that as one calculated to induce you to burst into cheers?

Musical Notes: The national association of musical dubs is considering the advisability of requiring performers who insist on giving the heaviest sort of classical compositions to put out a red light so that everybody knows he has stopped for the evening. * * * An eastern critic explains it this way: Good music is music that has no tunes; bad music is music that has tunes. Sounds reasonable. * * * Why does not the legislature make an investigation to ascertain what perfectly workable excuses a lot of men are able to work off on their wives so as to avoid attending classical musical entertainments?

A woman does not make a good spy, according to Sir Basil Thompson, former head of the British secret service, speaking recently in New York. She gets compunction at the wrong moment, he explained. She has obtained information from some one who should not have given it, and then when she should pass it along, she feels it would be unfair to her informant and withholds it, he said.

ABE MARTIN

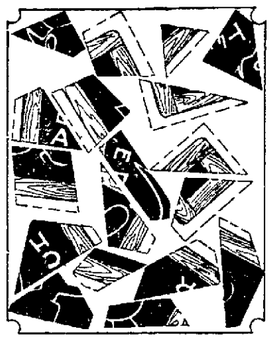

"That girl'll need a kitchen cabinet before she's married a month," said Em Moots t'day, when she heard Mrs. Art Bentley hadn' missed a dance this week It must make th' ole-time cobbler sigh when he sees th' modern shoe repairer rollin' along in his limousine.

Returning the Compliment.

More than one third of the 1922 potato crop is still in the hands of the farmers, according to a statement of a salesman for the Potato Growers' Exchange Would it not, then, be a very gracious thing to ship a car load (freight charges to be paid at the other end), to the home of each congressman, in return for those free seeds?—Detroit News.
